THE

Nine Worthies

OFTHE

WORLD.

H

II.

lufti

Upon the Nine WORTHIES of the World.

BY Arms and Virtue those to Honour rose,
By both they wanquished and subdu'd their Foes s Whereby of Worthies they obtain'd the Name, Whose Acts are register'd in the Book of Fame:
Though they are Dead, their Deeds will never die, But still be sevens to posserity.

HISTORY

OF THE

line WORTHIES of the World.

Three whereof were GENTILES.

HECTOR, Son of Priamus, King of Tray.

ALEXANDER the Great, King of Macedon.

L. JULIUS CESAR, first Emperor of Rome.

Three JEWs.

V. Joshua, Captain General of Ifrael.

DAVID, King of Ifrael.

I. Judas Maccabeus, a valiant Commander.

Three CHRISTIANS.

II. ARTHUR, King of Britain.

III. CHARLES the Great, Emperor of Germany, K. Godfrey of Boloign, King of Jerusalem.

eing an Account of their glorious Lives, worthy Actions, renowned Victories and Deaths.

lustrated with Poems, and the Pictures of each WORTHY.

By ROBERT BURTON.

K

DUBLIN:

tinted for T H O M A S B R O W N E, Bookfeller, at the Bible, in High-fireat. M DCC LIX.

BRITISH MUSEUN R. W. W. A. A. P. berei ector Grand

ree

ng of my file and the must have

untry Gred d Go

Holy Haw

bat I

ader.

READER.

TAVING often beard and read of the Nine 1. Worthies, and not meeting with any particu-Relation of them, I thought it might be worth while to feareb out who they were, and found that e Ancients celebrated the Memory of Nine renow-Persons, for the most worthy Heroes in the Ages berein they lived; three whereof were Gentiles, ector, Son of Priamus, King of Troy; Alexander Great, King of Macedon, and Conqueror of the orld; and Julius Cæfar the first Emperor of Rome. pree were Jews; Joshua Captain General, and Leaof the Hebrews into the Land of Canaan; David ng of Israel; and Judas Maccabens, a valiant wish Champion against the Tyranny of Antiochus. nd the last three were Christians; Arthur, the faus King of Britain, who valiantly defended his untry against the Saxons: Charlemaign, or Charles Great, King of France, and Emperor of Germany; d Godfrey of Boloign, called King of Jerusalem, for morable for his gallant Atchievements in recovering Holy Land from Sarazens and Infidels.

Having discovered their Names, I next endeavoured collect from the most credible and authentic Authors but I could meet with of the worthy Actions and Exits, whereby they obtained the great Title of Worles, which I hope will both please and inform the

ader.

Hector of Troy.

era

onl

mus.

and

onfi

Ti

lia

nat

rete

R Enouvned Hector, Priam's valiant Son, Descrivedly the Name of Worthy won;
His Countries Miseries be did foresee,
And sherefore first engaged unwillingly:
But when his Father's Glory call'd him forth, He then display'd his Gallantry and Worth;
His thundring Arm no Gracian could withstand,
All sted and trembled where he did command.
At length at unawares he lost his Life.
Achilles thus betwixt them ends the Strife: Troy and his Father's House soon after fell, As Helen and Caslandra did foretel.

THE

HISTORY

OF

HECTOR of TROY,

The first WORTHY of the Wort D.

rupted the History of the Destruction of Tray ith their Fictions and Fables as they have most ther true Stories of former ages; yet it is most ertainly related by antient Historians of undoubted eracity, that the Ruin of this famous City was occioned by the means of a wooden Horse, as is commonly believed: And that Hestor, the Son of King Primus, of whom we now write the Life, was a renowned and valiant Captain, and lost his Life in Desence of is Father and his Country; but for the better underanding the Story, we will look farther back, and onsider the Original of this once magnificent City.

Troy was heretofore one of the most noble Cities of Sia Minor, as well for its Largeness and Riches, as for nat renowned War which it managed against the Armies of Greece; it was fituate in Phrygia, a province retching itself upon the Coast of the Ægem Sea,

11 A 4

nent

near the Hellespont, called now the River of Constan tinople, over against the Chersonesus of Thracia, and the Island Tenedos, which was not far distant from it; the River Scamander, which proceeded from Mount Ida, ran by the Walls thereof, and joining with the River Simois they both together empty themselve into the Sea, near the Promontory called Sigeum.

The first who built this, City, and commanded then in chief, was Dardanus the Son of the King of Co rinth; when his elder Brother was dead, a Dispute arose between him and his other Brother about the Succession, part of the People favouring one, and the rest the other, but Dardanus having at length defeated and killed his Brother Jasius, he with his Favourite were forced, for their Security, to take Shipping and fly into Phrygia, where he married the Daughter of King Teucer, with whom he jointly reigned in tha Country, which was then named Teucria, and after ward Dardania, by which Name also the City of Troy was then called. This happened about the Tim that Mofes left the Leading of the People of Ifras to Johna, about seven hundred Years before th building of the City of Rome, and 650 Years after the is fust Foundation of the Affyrian Monarchy.

Dardanus left his Kingdom to his Son Erichthonius who begat Tros; when he was posses'd of the King dom he called the City after his own Name, Troja and the Country round about, Troas; This Troas has feveral Sons, the eldeft was named Ganimedes, an having War with Tantalus, King of Pbrygia, he too his Son Ganimedes Prisoner, and sent him as a Presen Tupiter. King of Crete (now called Candia) and this gave Occasion to the Fable that Ganimedes wa who was Father of Capys, of whom came Anchised

the hi

be

bor

Hei

of I

I

Troj

une

hei

ren

Pofi

er

help

ong

Hop

or refu

hat

Day

t t

ever

extr

o L

ng

Wan

enc

701 node

vhi

he mea

fter

the Favourite of Venus, who had by him Anens, born upon the Banks of the River Simois. But the Heir of his Crown was Ilus, who altered the Name of Troy to Ilium, which he mightily enriched.

fan

and

ron

ron

with lva

hen

Co

put

t the

the

ated

rite

and

tha

fter

Fim

Lasmedon succeeded his Father Ilus ; he fortified Iroy with Walls, by the Affiltance of Apollo and Nepune, who being both fallen into Displeasure with heir Prince, and seeing themselves reduced to exreme poverty in a strange Country, far from their Possessions, which were in Crete, they resolved to ener themselves into the Service of King Laomedon, to help to build the Walls of his City. They wrought ong for this ungrateful King, but when they faw no Hopes of the Reward promised them, with an Oath or their Labours, but that he was so unworthy to er o refuse it he was afflicted with many Diseases, so hat to be delivered, he was forced to expose his own Daughter Hesione to be devoured by a Sea-Monster, y o t being required of them to deliver up a Virgin every Year to be destroyed by them: The King was Ifrat extremely concerned that the Lot should fall upon th his Daughter, but Hercules travelling that Way came er the o Laomedon, and offered to deliver her, by destroyoniu ng the Monster, if the King would give him a Re-King ward of some noble Horses, called for their Excelha Trov. The Promise was made, but perfidious & an medon stood not to it, after Hesione was set at lib refer he City of Troy, took and plundered it, killed & an medon, and carried his Son into Captivity, who was racu caute was named Priamus, which in Greek fignifies nebil edeemed. To effect this, Hercules had the Affistance the his Friends and Allies, especially of Telamon the King of Salames, and Father of Ajax; he carrie away all Laomedon's Wealth with Hesione his daugh ter, who was married to K. Telamon.

Priamus being redeemed by his Subjects, and established in the Kingdom, began to enlarge his Dominions, and to render the City of Troy far more far mous than ever it was before; for he rebuilt all the Walls, adorning them with Forts and Bastions, which were then called Pergama. His Wise's Name was Hicuba, Daughter of the King of Thracia; she has by him many Sons, as Hestor. Polites, Deiphobus and three Daughters named Polyxena, Cassandra, and Creusa; his Court and Palace were full of Pomp and Glory, and he lived in this prosperous State man reight for People against Greece, thereby engaging him fell in the public Enmity of his Country, and suffere Paris to affront the Grecians, he brought upon him self and his Subjects utter Ruin and Destruction, and was at last so unhappy as to behold with his ow ap Eyes, the total Desolation of the City of Troy, which had lasted only 300 Years, as Herodotus, a faithful Historian hath related.

When Hecuba was with Child of Paris she dreame with the was bringing into the World a Firebrand, the right should kindle the Flames of War in that Country was and cause a general Destruction therein. It was the Custom of the Heathens, when any strange Accident happened to consult the Oracles, and enquire from them what they ought to do; when Priamus there The fore understood his Wife's Dream, he sent to take Advice with the Oracle, who informed him that have Child would be the Cause of the Ruin of his Country ing To prevent this, as soon as he was born, the Kin who delivere arrie elivered him into the Hands of a Soldier, named laugh Archelaus, that he might cast him into the Woods to e devoured of the wild Beafts, and thereby avoid l esta he Mischief which threatened his Kingdom; but the s . Do Nother feeing the Child fo beautiful, and well-shaped, ore fa ore fa vas moved with Compassion, and sent him to Mount all the da to the King's Shepherd, where he was brought which p as his Son: this mean Education did not take the was room him the generous Qualities and Inclinations he ha which he had received from his illustrious Birth, for chobbus on every Occasion, he made appear to all the World adorus, great Courage, Prudence, and Justice, and all other as an Virtues worthy of a Prince, so that he proved as vaniant as he was handsome; insomuch that the Poets man eigned Juno, Pallas, and Venus agreed to chuse him of those Arbitrator and Judge of their Concern's, in a Difference between them, which was this.

At the Marriage of Peleus and Thetis, whilst these him could be appeared at the Goddes of him Goddesses were merry at the Feast, the Goddess of him Goddesses were merry at the Feast, the Goddess of an Discord cast into the middle of the Company a Golden sow Apple with this Inscription, For the Fairest and most which Beautiful. Each of these claimed it as their own, saithst and because they could not agree, they resolved to eave it to the Judgment of Paris, who was corrupted with the Charms and Promises of Venus, for she had a the engaged to procure him the handsomest Lady in the country World, whereupon he despised the Riches of Juno and as the Wisdom of Pallas, and pronounced his Sentence coider in favour of Venus, whereby he provoked the Wrath of these Goddesses against himself and all his Nation, there This is the Fable.

ther This is the Fable. to tak After in a public Assembly he declared who he that hwas; for the Nobles and Gentry of the Country becauntrying met near the City, to see the Sport of Wrestling Kinwhen every one strove to express his Strength and livere

m an ne

m

H

Gi

wh

thi

anc

len

tak

hav

vit

Ric

kno

ers

vill

Iel

eek

ort

eve

obl

ore

erf

hic

eir

The

tly

ga

IR,

)R

ton

Courage, he likewise went forth, and threw to the Ground many who undertook to engage with him; Hetter the Son of Priamus, among the rest, did try his Strength, and was also overcome; but this Disgrace to enraged him against Paris, that he refolved to kill him, esteeming him no better than a Country-Clown. In his Anger he had taken away his Life, had not Paris, to prevent it shewn him certain small Jewels which Queen Hecuba, his Mother, had delivered to the Shepherd, his Tutor, and thereby declared himself to be his Brother. King Priamus, who had already admired his Address and Courage in the Combats, was ravished with Joy to understand the strange Preservation of such an excellent Son. He therefore embraced him, brought him to his Palace, and gave him a Train of Attendants, fuitable to his Quality, forgetting the Oracle foretold he was to be the Ruin of his Kingdom and Country; he was at first renowned for his Justice and civil Behaviour, but Vice overcame his generous Disposition; and the Pleasures of the Court, and sudden Change of his Condition, alte d his Temper and Carriage, so that he had two natural Sons by Oenon, Dupbnis and Ideus, who were as obscure as their Father was famous.

King Priamus thinking himself now strong enough to encounter his old Enemies the Gracians, assembled his Nobility to Court, to whom he spake to this Purcose:

My Lords,

YOU cannot forget the cruel Injuries we have undefervedly received from the Greeks, who lately invaded our Country, and barbaroully murdered your Parents and Friends, as well as mine; having likewise carried away Captive Hessone, my most fair and beloved Sister, whom they still retainamong them as a common Strumpet; you must needs remember how they battered down this famous City, overthrowing and ruining the Walls, Houses, and Palaces thereof, even to the very Ground, and robbed us of all our Riches and Wealth wherewith Troy did then abound. I therefore think it very just and reasonable that, by the Assistance of the Gods, who refift the Proud and Infolent, we ought to join together, and endeavour to take Vengeance of them for those many Wrongs we have received, fince our City is now fo well peopled with valiant Soldiers, and that we have Arms and Riches enough to furnish a compleat Army. You know likewise we have made Alliances with diers great Princes our Neighbours, who no doubt, will affift us if we should have occasion for their Help. So that my Opinion is, we ought now to eek Redress for all our Wrongs: But fince the ortune of War is uncertain, and none can tell the event thereof; and though the Dishonour of my oble Sister be a very great Affront to me, yet beore I begin the War, I will fend some prudent erson fairly to demand the Restitution of Hesione; hich if granted, I will be content to remit all eir other Affronts.'

The whole Council approved of this his Resolu-, and Anthenor, one of his Princes, was intly dispatched to Salamine, to King Telamon, and g admitted into his Presence, he thus address'd

IR,

e ;

y ſ-

e-

2 ay

m

0-

or,

ng

nd

to el-

im

ts,

blo

n-

vil

ofi-

len

nd

Fa-

ugh

oled

ur-

who

ne;

most

)RIAMUS, King of Troy, hath fent me to your Highness, to desire you would please to tore him his Sister Bessone, whom, contrary to

the

the Laws of Honour, you detain as your Concu m bine, it being no Way proper to your Glory the nd to abuse the Daughter and Sifter of a King, wh rei

m

fuc

wo

An

issues from a more noble Family than yourself. Yo if you please to send her back, my stand Damage ing to pass by all other Indignities and Damage if you please to fend her back, my Master is will which he hath received from you or yours."

King Telamon, upon hearing this Message fell in plu an extreme Passion, and fiercely replied;

FRIEND,

1 X 7 Hatever you are, I cannot but much admit VV at the Weakness of Priamus, with whom ore have no Correspondence, nor Amity, and whom or, have not the least Cause to fear, nor grant his Reed quest. Thy King ought to remember that I am N others, my Confederates, came into his Country ous, revenge an Injury which his Father Laomedon ons fered to fome of our Allies; and because I was toug first who entered the City of Troy with great Date En ger of my Life and Effusion of Blood, Hessone, V whom thou speakest, was bestowed on me as ry me Recompence of my Victory, to use her at my place is and since she is so noble and beautiful a Laster I am very unwilling to be deprived of what is designed in the many much Pains and Danger. Go therefore and lace Priamus, that he is never like to recover her much Pains and Danger. Go therefore and lace with the Point of his Sword; neither can I the with the Point of his Sword; neither can I the with the Point of his Sword; neither can I the voyage with so great Peril of thy Life, and of my bring such an Errand into a Country, where twise and thy Countrymen are mortally heated: I come and thy Countrymen are mortally heated: I coo m mand thee therefore to go hence with all speed Vron thou hopest to escape a severe and cruel Death. hreat

Anthenor inflantly took hipping, and carried id ft ncome Message to King Peleus, then to King Castor the nd Pollux, and lastly to Duke Nestor, all of them wherecom Princes, who all desied Priamus with the Ye most Contempt and Scorn, especially Nestor, who will enraged, said, nage

THOU vile Wretch, were it not for my No-I bility, I would cause thy Tongue to be in pluck'd out of thy Mouth, for prefuming to utter fuch Things before me, and in Despite of thy King would see thee torn piece-meal by wild Horses.'

Anthenor doubting he might be as good as his nom ord returned immediately to Sea, and failed toward nom by, where, at length, after many Dangers, he ar-is R ved in Safety. And then in the Company of seve-I all Noblemen he presented himself before King Pritry ons, all the Barons of the Realm, and all the King's fon one being present to hear what Tidings he had was tought; to whom Anthenor gave a full Account of Das Embassy, and of all that happened to him during one, a Voyage. At the recital whereof, Priamus was as my much disturbed and by their opprobious Speeches Laster without bringing on himself the utmost Force at is d Fury of the Gracians.

with Soon after he again assembled his Nobility to his and lace of Ilium, to whom he thus spake.

My Lords,

I the YOU may remember, that by your advice I fent e suc Y Anthener into Greece, to demand the Return and of my Sister by a'll fair Means possible; you likeere twife are fensible what injurious Answers they gave I so my Proposals, and how little they value the speed Vrongs we have received, insomuch that they ath. breaten us with new Mischiefs, which Heaven fortried id should ever fall upon us; but fince we have a m nd

rec

me

e

fuc

wo

An

the Laws of Honour, you detain as your Concu bine, it being no Way proper to your Glory that to abuse the Daughter and Sister of a King, wh issues from a more noble Family than yourself. Ye if you please to fend her back, my Master is will ing to pass by all other Indignities and Damage which he hath received from you or yours.'

King Telamon, upon hearing this Message fell in plu an extreme Passion, and siercely replied;

FRIEND,

1 X 7 Hatever you are, I cannot but much admit 'VV at the Weakness of Priamus, with whom force have no Correspondence, nor Amity, and whom by, have not the least Cause to fear, nor grant his Reed quest. Thy King ought to remember that I at N others, my Confederates, came into his Country ous, revenge an Injury which his Father Laomedon ons fered to some of our Allies; and because I was boug first who entered the City of Troy with great Da Enger of my Life and Effusion of Blood, Hestone, V whom thou speakest, was bestowed on me as ry n Recompence of my Victory, to use her at my ple per fure; and fince she is so noble and beautiful a Laster I am very unwilling to be deprived of what is d For delightful to me, and whom I obtained with Soon much Pains and Danger. Go therefore and lace Priamus, that he is never like to recover her My with the Point of his Sword; neither can I the thou art a very discreet Person to undertake such Voyage with so great Peril of thy Life, and so my bring such an Errand into a Country, where twise and thy Countrymen are mortally heated: I co my mand thee therefore to go hence with all speed from thou hopest to escape a severe and cruel Death. hreate

Apthenor inftantly took hipping, and carried id h ncome Message to King Peleus, then to King Castor thund Pollux, and laftly to Duke Nestor, all of them whe recian Princes, who all defied Priamus with the Month Contempt and Scorn, especially Nestor, who will enraged, said,

THOU vile Wretch, were it not for my No-I bility, I would cause thy Tongue to be in pluck'd out of thy Mouth, for prefuming to utter fuch Things before me, and in Despite of thy King would see thee torn piece-meal by wild Horses.'

Anthener doubting he might be as good as his om ord returned immediately to Sea, and failed toward om by, where, at length, after many Dangers, he ar-is Red in Safety. And then in the Company of seve-I at Noblemen he presented himself before King Pritry ous, all the Barons of the Realm, and all the King's ras tought; to whom Anthenor gave a full Account of Da Embassy, and of all that happened to him during one, Voyage. At the recital whereof, Priamus was as my much disturbed and by their opprobious Speeches Laster without bringing on himself the utmost Force at is d Fury of the Gracians.

with Soon after he again assembled his Nobility to his and lace of Ilium, to whom he thus spake.

My Lords,

I the OU may remember, that by your advice I fent fuc I Anthener into Greece, to demand the Return and I my Sifter by a'l fair Means possible; you likere twife are fenfible what injurious Answers they gave I so my Proposals, and how little they value the speed Vrongs we have received, insomuch that they that breaten us with new Mischiefs, which Heaven for-tried id should ever fall upon us; but since we have a ftrong and well fortified City, and several confid rable Princes firmly confederate with us, in Opinion we are in a Capacity to revenge these iterated Damages; therefore if you think fit, will fend our Forces privately into their Countri where finding them utterly unprovided of Defend

we shall be able in some Measure to right ourselv upon them; neither ought you to be discourage because they have been lately so victorious again us, fince it often happens that the Conquerors

! length are vanquish'd by the Conquered.'

All prelent were fatisfy'd with this Determination and being all difmis'd, he called all his Sons w were not present at the Debate, to whom he aga declared his Intention, with Tears in his Eyes to the

DEAR SONS.

TOU ought never to forget the Death of yo I Grandfather Laomedon nor the Servitude your Aunt Hesione, whom the Greeks our inves rate Enemies, abuse at their own Pleasure, whi methinks should stir up Thoughts of Revenge our Minds; but if this do not move you, yet y ought to endeavour it for my Satisfaction, have brought you up with the utmost Care and I Ligence, and who am ready to die with Sorrow as Veration in reflecting on the multiplied Affronts have received from them, and thou, my wife at valiant Son Heffor, thou who art the eldest of a Brethren, I require thee chiefly to undertake t Welf Matters thou shalt be the principal Commander executing this my Will; and all the rest will glad obey thee, yea, the whole Kingdom will willing fubmit to thy Conduct, whom they know to be hould valiant and courageous, and therefore upon the

nui

nyl

ind

nd.

Rep

To

et .

Dea

A

b ion

am

buf

atu

ery

her, vho

ur

inte

ffue

aufe

ot

nly

Advi

hat :

ind

iers,

omp

vho

Value

Effate

nust lay all the Burden of this War, and discharge nyself thereof, not doubting but by thy Prudence ind Valour all will be brought to an happy Effect, nd thy Father be revived in his old Age with the Reports of thy growing Glory.'

To this Speech, Hellor returned this mild and dif-et Answer :

ifid

1 1

fe

ntri

fend

felv

rage

gain

ors

atio

s w aga

o th

de

whi

ge

· m

Dear Father, and my Sovereign Lord,

Am fatisfied that there are none of your Sons but are sufficiently inclined to require Satisfacion for any Wrongs offered us, or any of our family, and according to the Quality of the Person bused, so doth the Injury appear greater; it is atural to Men to seek redress of Injuries, yea the ery Beafts by Nature strive to do the fame; neiher, most dear Father, is there any of your Sons vho ought more fensibly to refent the Marder of ur Lord and Grandfather, than I who am the eld-ft; but I befeech you, before you undertake this f yo interprize, to confider ferionfly, what may be the nvet flue and Event thereof, otherwise you may have ause to repent that ever it was begun; I speak ot this out of Contradiction or Cowardise, but only to induce your Highness to take mature and Deliberation in the Matter. You know hat all Africa and Freeds are Subject to the Greeks. hat all Africa and Europe are subject to the Green, was and that they abound with flout and valiant Solonts iers, so that our Strength in Men at Arms is not comparable to theirs; why therefore should we, of the value in Peace and Quietness, disturb our own who live in Peace and Quietness, disturb our own Welfare and Prosperity? Hessone is not of so much value that we should endanger all our Lives and Estates only for her sake; she hath been already a ling ong Time in Greece, and I think it were better she hould spend the rest of her Days, which cannot be the hat all Africa and Europe are subject to the Greeks, many, in that Country, than that we should ru fuch great Hazards to fetch her home again.: again declared, dread Sir, I speak not this for Feat or want of Courage, but because the chance of Wa is uncertain, and left Fortune by this Adventur

should confound and destroy our Realm, or at lea cause us to wish a thousand times that we had neve undertaken so dangerous an Enterprize.'

When Paris heard Heffor thus declare his Mind, was much concerned, and standing up faid,

DREAD LORD,

Befeech you hear me one Word, to what End can this Undertaking against the Green s possibly come? Are we not furnished with as gr Iant and courageous Knights as any in the World " Yes, certainly, and we are able to defy the greate Force that can be brought against us; go on then fore I entreat you, in your Defign in fending for " Men and Ships to land and forage in Greece, and you please to accept of my Service, I shall me readily undertake this Employ, not doubting but do them very great Damage, and to bring awa fome noble Lady, by exchanging of whom you may recover your Sifter Hesione without furth " Trouble."

Deiphobus the third Son, confirmed what Paris ha faid; but Helenus, the fourth who was a Priest Southfayer, fmartly replied:

Mighty Father and Sovereign,

Eware that the Thirst of Revenge do not bris D upon you greater Mischief; you know ver well I understand and can foretell Things to come, you have often experienced. The Gods forbid th it should ever happen that Paris should be sent in Greece, for if you make an Affault upon them, no

ab

an

no

ut

Q

efc

fha

T

or f

oun

M

900 any vea

Fol

If I

and

reve

rece fore

ject :

your

The

roke

ons.

a: 1

ropbe

ne Fr

ation

now declare and presage, you shall see this honourable City destroyed by them, and your Trojans, and all your Children killed; be therefore persuaded not to adventure upon what will certainly end in the utter Desolation, with the Death of yourself and Queen, and we that are your Children shall not escape; or if Paris go into Greece, all those Evils shall furely come upon you.

The King was much disturbed at these Words, and or some Time all stood silent; when Troylus his oungest Son briskly answered; My Noble Lords,

eal Vo

t

g ate

ien

on

nd

mo

ut

awa

urth

h est

brit

ne,

d th

at in

em,

Why are you discouraged for the Words of this cowardly Priest, who you know doth as naturally hate War and Fighting, as he loves good Eating and Drinking? Who can believe that any Man knows future Events, unless they are revealed to him by the Gods? It were then great Folly in us to concern ourselves about his Dreams, If Helenus be afraid, let him go into the Temple and sing Service; and let us, dear Lord and Father, revenge by Force of Arms, the Injuries we have received from the Greeks. Send your Ships therefore instantly, and doubt not but your valiant Subjects will procure you sufficient Satisfaction from your Enemies.

The whole Assembly approving this Advice, they roke up, and Priamus presently dispatched his two ons, Paris and Deiphobus, to raise Forces in Panoia; though Cassandra, his Daughter, sirnamed the ropbetes, upon hearing this their Resolution, like ne Frantick, thus cried out;

H! noble City of Troy, what Fury hath moved thy Citizens to bring thee to Ruin and Defolation? How foon wilt thou be overthrown and derity

the

fe !

inc

cin

ys

om

han

e fl

Dh!

abe

nfo

on

y (

y

vore

5 ?

ll n

11 1

lena

s du

ing

Silen

e fh

him

ning

latio

melar

tirus

bed.

froyed even unto the Ground? Oh! Queen Hecub for what Crime half thou deserved to see the la mentable Death of all thy Children? Why do thou not prevent Paris from going into Green which will be the Cause of so many deplorable

· Mischiefs.'

She then ran to her Father, and, drowned in Tear humbly belought him by no Means to proceed in th Enterprize, because, by her Science, she certain forefaw horrible Effects would undoubtedly follow But neither the Diffuations of Hellor nor Helenus, n the Admonitions of Cassandra, could prevail in the least upon the Mind of Priamus, nor stagger his R folution, as if inevitable Destiny had absolutely d figned the Ruin both of himself and his Kingdom.

In the Spring, Paris and Deiphabus returned wi three Thousand stout Soldiers, and were soon en barked in twenty Ships, accompanied with Energy Anthenor, and Polidamus, and landing at Spart were received by Menalaus, King thereof, with Expression of Kindness and Civility, and when Affairs did require his Presence in Crete (now Candin he left Raris at his Palace in his Absence : But t Affection of this King was requited with a notal Treason and Ingratitude; for Paris having secre contracted a Eriendship with Helena, his Queen, Sifter of Caftor and Pollux and accounted them o of the greatest Beauties in the World, he debauch her; and when he faw a favourable Opportunity, rifled his Palace, plundered the City of Argos, Vorlo carried all away Captive, with Helena and her t Ladies of Honour, and at length brought them to Troy; the next Morning he married her in Vife, chief Temple of that City: King Priamus received his Sons and their Booty with great Joy, rememb his hard Usage from the Greeks during his Capity, and because they had utterly ruined his City the Reign of his Father Laomedon, in hope likefe hereby to recover his Sister Hesione out of their ands. When Cassandra heard and saw the Recing at the Marriage of Paris, which lasted eight ys throughout the whole City, she like a frantick oman, cry'd out ;

eci

Ы

an th

in

jw

n

R

W

en

nea

art

h t

n h ndin

ut t otal

ecte

n, t

O PO

nuch ty,

.

er t

em

in

ecei

emb

H! unhappy Trojans, what Madness is it to rejoice at this Wedding, which shall bring so nany Evils? Your Selves and your Children shall e flain, this famous City shall be uttered destroyed: h! unhappy Mothers, you shall see your sucking abes torn in Pieces before your Eyes. Oh! most nfortunate Mother and Queen Hecuba, where wilt on find Tears enough to weep for the Murder of y Children? Oh! blind and foolish People, why you not fend Helena home again, before the words of your Enemies be sheathed in your Bow-? Do you believe that her King and Husband Il not feek Revenge? Yes, certainly, and woeful ll his Vengeance be unto you. Oh! unhappy lena, thou wilt be the Cause of sad Calamities to s our Country.

ing Priamus hearing her thus crying, commanded Silence, which the refuting, was cast into Prison, e she continued many Days: Happy had it been him and his People too, had they believed this ning of hers, which might have prevented those lations that will be read with Pity to the End of Vorld.

melaus, who was at that Time with King Neffor tirus, hearing the News of the carrying away Vife, and the Ruin of his City, was extremely bed, and fent to Agamemnon, King of Mycene, his

re

rce

t

ed

th oja effi

ay

at I

re

d:

0 1

eipl

eld

re

280 ny,

F

t I

rvin

ght

ing

avo

re

his

mpte

atroc

m w

a Di

Gr

Wrongs received.

his Brother, to come to him, who arriving and understanding the Affair, he was mightily concerned so this Disgrace of Menelaus, which obliged him to a quaint the Princes of Greece with this notable Affron which all the Nations had received by this Action. They all agreed to consult about this Business in the general Assemblies, where it was resolved to join their Forces together under the leading of Agame non, and revenge this Injury, and that they show oblige themselves solemnly by Oath, not to forsake the War till the Trojans had made full Satisfaction for the Befides Agamemnon, many other valiant Commi ders, and stout Soldiers, were met together in Gracian Army, as Palamedos, Achilles, Ajax, Uly Menelaus, Stenelus, Diomedes, Prothefilaus, Idomen and Neffer, who was faid to be Three hundred Ye old, and whose wise Counsel and Eloquence was serviceable to the Greeks, for he infinuated him into the Minds of the Auditors fo pleafantly, Honey had dropt from his Mouth with his Word They wanted no kind of Instruments for Engine War for an Affistance in a Siege: In short 'I ime Things being provided, the Gracians landed at Isle of Tenedos, three Miles from Troy, where foon got Possession of the Castle though valiantly fended by the Trojans; after which they fent to amus to demand Helena, and Satisfaction for the mages they had received by Paris; and if no affure him that sudden Ruin would fall upon him.

Priamus treated the Messengers very roughly, returned them back with an absolute Denial and sance to their General Agamemnon: who there ordered his Ships to sail immediately to Troy, being arrived, they endeavoured to land, but

1 f

roi

tio

ti

n

emi

ho

e

10 nm

in

 Ub_{j}

ment

Y

IS Y

him

y, a

Vor

gine

ime

d at ere

antly

to

the

him.

ghly

roy,

warmly received by the Trojans, who were prered for them on the Shore, that there enfued a very pody Battle, fo that the Greeks were fometimes reed back almost to their Ships; but being reinreed they pressed very hard upon the Trojans, so at a great 'Cry arose among them, which Hecthe most noble Worthy, hearing, he instantly ifed out of the City with fresh Forces, and meeting th Propiselaus who had that Day slain a great many ojans, he struck him dead to the Ground; then effing forward, he bore down all that stood in his ay, his Name being so terrible to his Enemies, at none durst withstand him; about Evening, Hecreturned into the City, when Achilles landing with Myrmidons made a great Slaughter of the Trojans d at length all the rest of the Fleet landed, though t without flout Opposition from Iroilus, Paris, and eiphobus, that Night the Greeks encamped in the eld, and the Trojans retired within the City, and ere besieged therein by the Greeks; next Morning ellor issued out of the Gates with a gallant Comny, when Patroclus advanced against him with all Force, fo that his Spear pierced through his Shield; t Hellor with one blow cut him down, and obrving his gallant Armour was defirous of it, and ghting to feize it, was immediately encountered by ing Memnon with three thousand Men, who enavoured to seize both him and his Horse, but Hecremounting, made his Way through the thickest f no his Foes, and overthrew all that opposed, and atmpted a fecond Time to take off the Armour of stroclus, when Idumeneus, King of Crete, came upon and m with two thousand more, who being enraged at there Disappointment, made a terrible Slaughter among Greeks, firiking off Heads, Legs, and Arms in but abundance abundance, and killing fifteen of the most valid Gracian Commanders with his own Hand : duri this Skirmish, King Memnon carried off the Body Patroclus to his Tent, and thereby defeated Hel

u

10 ife

om

fec

lė

ly.

ted

mf

nly

ing

ck

ant

ing

ht

Afte

in

the

kno

of his Prize to his great Vexation.

The Trojans hearing that Hellor was unhorfed, in great danger of his Life, issued out with all Strength they had to his Rescue, so that the Bat was renewed with more Fury than ever, and Hes being earnest in Fight was encompassed on all sid by the Enemy; but as his Danger fo his Valo encreased, so that like a raging Lyon, he broug Ruin and Destruction wherever he came; and havi another Horse brought him, his own being slain der him, he revived the Courage of the Trojans, w by the Multitude of their Enemies, were even tir out, and just ready to leave the Field; Hettor deavouring to put the Enemy to Flight, was hurt the Face with an Arrow shot by King Humerus, not without a quick Revenge, for Hellor instan returned upon him, and flew him: and prefently ter meeting with King Memnon, Ha! Traitor, for he, that hinderest me from taking the Arms of Patrock I will now be avenged of thee; and therewith ftru him dead off his Horse. This day the Trojans h great Advantage of the Greeks; and might have an End to the War, had not Hellor unhappily a with Ajax in an Encounter, and understanding was his Kinsman, instead of killing him, as he mig have done, embraced him in his Arms; and invi him to come to Troy, and see his Kindred. fubtilly answered, That it was not now a conven red Time; but if he bad so much Kindness for him as ande Said, de defired for bis Sake the Battle might a that Day only ; to which Hellor readily agreed.

wing a Horn, thereby re called all the Trojans the City, who had already begun to fet Fire to Gracian Ships, and had burnt them all if they not been prevented by this unfortunate Accident. The Truce being expired, both fides foon prepared in for Battle; and both Armies being ready, Hellor ulted Achilles who commanded the Greeks, with great Force, that both fell to the Earth: Hellor hounted first, leaving Achilles on the Ground, and in among the Body of his Enemies, whom he y on all Hands, having his Armour covered with Blood of his Opponents. Achilles recovering felf fell likewise with great Fury upon the Troand at length again encountered Hector, by om he was again difmounted; but being foon fed again, there enfued a bloody Duel between le two gallant Commanders, and they had cerly killed each other, had they not been timely ted: The rest of the Trojan Generals behaved mselves with much Courage, and Hestor was comnly at the Head of them : King Prothenor obring his Advantage, came fuddenly upon him, and ck him to the Earth; but Hellor remounting in an ant, foon dispatched him, whereat the Trojans ing courage, followed the Gracians fo close that fled to their Tents, whom they purfued till the prevented them, and then returned into the

vali

duri

ody

Heb

all

Bat

Heb

1 fid

Valo

rou

havi

ain I

n tir

or c urt

215, aftan

trocl

ftru

rs h ve

ily n ing

mi

invi

went

as

ed. ble After this Battle, Agamemnon called a Council of ir in his Tent, wherein they concluded, that it in vain to hope for Success against their Enemics the valiant Heffor was killed, and therefore they red Achilles, as well for his Strength as Wildom, indertake it; Achilles readily accepted this Charge, knowing Heller to be his mostal Adversary, and being willing he should die rather by his Hand th any other: Soon after, the Trojans again issued a of the City, and engaged with the Greeks, in whi Battle the valiant Hellor flew three of the Greek Pri ces, and again encountered Achilles, both of the being again dismounted by the Force of their Spean but Night coming on, both fides retired. In the m Fight many gallant Commanders were killed, but Trojans loft more than the Greeks. But in the fever Battle, though Hector was very much disfuaded fr fighting that Day, both by his Father Priamus, a his Wife Andromache, who feeing him armed fell N his Feet, together with her two little Sons, huml ath entreating him to disarm himself, since she had dream par the Night before, that if he went out that Day, should certainly be slain, and, said she, If you a pun not do it for my Sake, yet have Compassion on your de at s little Children, and do not expose both them and me to flor little Children, and do not expose both them una more cruel Death, or cause us by your Death to be carried into Slavery in a strange Country. But her Real ings not in the least prevailing, his Mother, Que aft Hecuba, and Queen Helena, with all his Sifters, ca hou to him with Tears in their Eyes, and begged him to go out; yet all to no Purpose, for taking erev Horse, he was just going into the Fight, which already begun, when his Father Priamus, feizing for Horse by the Bridle, prevented him, and made being return, but he would by no means be persuaded gen difarm.

The Battle was very bloody to the Trojans, and identified the obstinate Valour of the Greeks, they were beaucht back to the City Gates, and Morgetton, one of I can amus's natural Sons, was flain by Achilles; while, when Hellor heard, he was so enrag'd that puttes, on his Helmet, he privately got away into the Fig.

whiletto

er

eek efe

her

his

IVO

Hos

h

ut

to

fo

whi

Pri

the

eat

ut t

ere he soon dispatched several of the most forward cek Captains, and again restored the Battle by his fence, so that the Greeks lay dead on all sides : hen Achilles observing Hestor to make such Hayock e no his Commanders, he concluded, that all his Enavours or hopes of Success would be in vain whilst ever flor lived, and therefore taking a noble Gracian fre h him called Polieceas, they came upon him with t, a utmost Fury imaginable, but Hellor foon dispatched fell Nobleman; Achilles resolving to revenge his umb ath, assaulted him courageously; but Hellor threw ear part at him with such Violence, that it wounded y, a in the Thigh; Achilles retired to bind up his use bund, and then returning to the Battle with a very at at Spear, wherewith he vowed to be the Death of e to for, he found him carrying a Gracian Prince very carried armed out of the Field, having thrown his Real eld behind him for his Ease, and thereby left his Que aft uncovered; Achilles observing his Advantage, , ca hout being perceived by Hellor came suddenly in to him, and thrust his Spear into his Body, ing crewith the gallant Worthy fell instantly dead to ich Ground; King Memnon who was present, seeing zing For slain fell upon Achilles with his utmost Force, de king him to the Ground, and wounding him very aded geroufly, but his Soldiers laid him upon his Shield, so carried him into his Tent; the Trojans were and derfully discouraged at his Death, and retired into bez City with much Sorrow and Lamentation: But of he can express the Grief of his Father, Mother, while, and Kindred? They tore their Garments and puttes, and were for a long Time as it were distracted e Fig Grief.
whiletter being buried with much Funeral Pomp and e, the Trojans fell upon the Greeks, and cut off

Abun-

n

П

M

oja T

pr ele

1 gt

odi

ute

ore

S

Abundance of them in Revenge of his Death; conclude there were many flain, and much Blo spilt in the Sallies of the Besieged, and Mem whom the Trojans put their Trust in next to He being likewise slain, they were much terrified, was Achille: foon after killed by Paris, at which the began to take Courage again and express their Jo but it lasted not long, for Pyrrbus the Son of Achi being arrived from Greece, succeeded his Father in his Offices, and had no less Success in the Enco ters, although he was but very young: He reven his Death upon the Trojans in many Battles, in of which he killed Paris, at last the Besieged w so unhappy as to see their Palladium, upon wi they superflitiously believed the Safety of their C did depend stolen and carried away privately by Ul ole and Diomedes: You must know that Troy was far built by Dardania, and afterwards enlarged by Grandson Ilus, who named it Illium; this Prince median his Prayer to the Gods that they would please to get up him some Sign whether they did approve of secial Building of this City; immediately at his Wo leng faith the Story, there fell down from above, the loth ladium, which was an Image of three Cubits lone I holding in one Hand a Lance, and in the other infit Spindle with a Distaff; the Statue no sooner touch draw Earth, but it began to march in the Presence of Communication. King. The Oracle afterward informed him, we to Troy should never be taken nor destroyed whilst the remained safe; Ulysses and Diomedes stole secretly slatio the Citadel of Troy through a Gutter, and can Ulysses away the Palladium of this caused King Priams jans come to an Agreement with the Greeks, but had dy to mind to restore Helena, who was married to Do nded his youngest Son, after the Death of Payage A rtal h;

Blo

emn

Hel

1,

h ti Jo

Achi in nco

ven in l w

w

by

him

neas and Anthenor were commissioned to treat with Enemy, who concluded a Peace for a certain Sum Money, and a quantity of Provisions which the ojans were to furnish the Greeks for their return. This Peace was but a Cheat that the Greeks might prize them with less Difficulty; when they raised Siege, they pretended to leave behind them a elent for Minerva to appeale her Wrath, as if they displeased her by stealing away and prophag the Palladium; for that Purpose they caused a oden Horse of a prodigious Bigne's, to be made; the Belly of it they that up a great many of the uteft and ablest Soldiers of the Army, and left it fore the Walls of the City and retired with their ir (ole Forces, as if for good and all, but they went as farther than the Isle of Tenedos, expecting to see Success of their Enterprize. The Befieged imto get up so long; they visit all the Quarters of the of ecian Camp: they admire this great wooden Horse? Wo length they consult whether they should carry it the lo their City; some were for it, others suspected its lone Deceit, among whom one Lacoon cast his Launce other infinite it, but seemed to be instantly punished, for touch dreadful Serpents immediately killed him and his e of a Children This Accident caused them all to rem, we to drag this great wooden Engine into Troy, milit they were far more eager when they heard the edy lation and Discourse of one Sinon, a Fellow taught can Uliffes for this Purpose, and taken as a Spy by the same jans; who told them, that when the Fleet was had dy to set sail towards Greece, the Gods had de-Do nded a Gracian to be facrificed to them, that the of P yage might be prosperous, and that Ulvifes, his tal Enemy having caused the Lot to fall up n

ng

e,

in

Th

bis

him, he was forced to run away and hide himse Thus persisting in his Dissimulation, he told the that the Design of the Greeks was to reconcile the selves to the Goddess Pallas, and therefore they he dedicated unto her this Horse, which they had cause to be made so large, that it might not enter with the Walls of the City, and that the Trojans mig not make use of it to their Advantage, and to Prejudice of the Greeks.

This Discourse removed out of their Minds Jealoufy and Suspicion, and caused them to resol to break down a Part of the City Wall to carry this great Horse; every one employed himself in the great Work with all their Power and Diligence, a having drawn it into the midst of the City, they departed to drink, dance and make merry, when they continued till Night, and were then overcon with Wine and Sleep : When Sinon faw Things this Posture, he opened the Belly of the Horse, let out the Soldiers that had been there thut in: then he made a Fire to give Notice to the Green Army, who hastning back without Noise, enter by the Breach lately made in the Wall, and foon operfed themselves into every part of the City to be and plunder it. Pyrebus went directly to the Pala where he massacred King Priamus, and all his So and his Daughter Polizena; the rest of the poor babitants had no Quarters granted them, but were eruelly murdered, without respect to Quality, Sex, Age; and thus, after ten Years Siege, this fame City was deftroyed, and burnt to the Ground, abo three hundred Years after it had been built by D danus, and about two Thousand eight Hundred Ye from the Creation of the World. Helena the Oc fion of all this Defolation returned with her H

fel

th

he

e h aul

vith mig

0 1

ls efol ry

ey hen rco ngs ra ente on o b Pala is So or were Sex. famo d Ye

Oct

er H

d to Sparta, where she lived till his Death. She ng afterwards banished by the Sons of Menelaus, to Rhodes to Queen Polixena her old Acquaine, who fuffered her to be hang'd on a Tree for infamous and wicked Life.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT

E fecond Worthy was Great Alexander. That waliant Captain and renown'd Commander, bis Youth did the known World subdue, nept because be found no more to do.

He

hq

h t

ed

ch

n

be

1

A

Ai

ch

his ifie

s t

fo

d ir

ana

ging

mfe

but gro

Trib

Virtu

wer

He was a Prince that bad a mighty Minde And to all glorious Adions was inclin'd: With thirty I boufand Men be put to Flight Six Hundred Thousand Persians, and quite Destroy'd that potent Monarchy which long Had triumph'd over Nations great and strong; Yet be who others could subdue, by Wine Was conquer'd, and did bis Life resign.

A LEXANDER the Great, was the Son Philip King of Macedon and Olympus; his ther after he subdued Greece, and was ackn ledged their Captain General, listed the Auxiliarie every City, by whom he was to be affifted against Invasion, or to lead them forth against any Nati for it was not doubted but that the Empire of Persians was the Design of those great Preparation the Number of the Foot were two Hundred T fand, and fifteen Thousand Horse; besides which had an Army of Macedonians, and another of barbarous Nation, who were conquered and bord upon his Kingdom. In the Spring, he fent Pa nio, Amyntas, and Attalus (whose Sister he had l married having divorced Olympius upon Sufpicio Incontinency) into that Part of Afia, which was der the Power of the Perfians, but while the haries of Greece were drawing into a Body, he brated the Nuptials of Cleopatra h's Daughter Alexander, whom he had made King of Fpirus Day was remarkable for the Magnificence of the Kings, the one Marrying, the other giving his D ter in Marriage; neither was there wanting the lights of Interludes and Marks ; to the behind whereof, when King Philip passed without a s F between the two Alexanders, his own Son and his

Law, Pausanias, one of the Nobility, being suffled by none, killed Philip as he was going thro' Croud, and made the Day, destined to Mirth Marriage, black with the Lamentation of a Fu-

This Paulanias, about the fourteenth Year of his e, was enforced to be a Proflitute or Sodomite to alus: to which Indignity this Ignominy was added. t Attalus, having afterwards brought him into the equet, and made him drunk, did not only expose to his own Luft, but to all his Guests, and rened him a common Laughing-stock among them; ch Paufanias refenting with great Indignation, en complained of it to Philip; but finding that he both deluded and delayed in his just Complaints, likewife that his adversary was honoured with a Addition of Power and Greatness, he converted Anger against Philip himself; and that Revenge ch he could not have on his Adversary, he took his unrighteous Judge; Pausanius was seized, and ified for the Fact.

Son

nis

ckn ario

hft !

Vati e of

ratio T

hich

r of

bord

Pa

nad l

picio

was the !

he

hter, pirus

f the

nd his

s there were divers Nations in the Army of Phifo he being flain, there were divers Agitations of d in them; in these Distractions, the coming of ander was a fovereign Remedy, who in a very ging' Speech, quieted their Minds, and procured mself a very great Esteem from them: He was but twenty Years old, and gave exceeding Hopes growing Virtue; he freed the Macedonians from Tribute whatfoever, unless a discharge from the wherewith they were extremely fatisfied, deais Dong, that they had only loft the Person, but not ng the Virtue or Valour of their King; he caused all beho were guilty of his Father's Death, to be flain a dis Funeral; he awed many Nations who were

ir

h

in

ho

ha

gh

at

re

Sh

H

Vet

ft h, e L

dif d b

thou

ready to rebel, and marching privately into Gra called the Magistrates of all the Cities to Corinth, whom he was made General in the Place of his ther; after which he proceeded in his Preparation for the Perfian War begun by his Father, dun which he had notice that the Athenians, Laceds nians, and Thebans had revolted to the Perfiant the Treachery of Demostbenes the Orator, who rupted him with a great Sum of Gold; but u Alexander's Approach they foon returned again their Obedience, the Thebans only perfifting, were thereupon quickly subdued, their City levelle the Ground, and their Citizens fold for Captives.

Alexander being now wholly intent upon the in Afia, put to death all his Kindred or Frie that he imagined might nourish any aspiring Though after which having drawn his Army all into one B he speedily embarked them, and being come wi Sight of Afia, enflamed with an incredible Ardo Spirit, he erected twelve Altars, where he made Vows to the Gods of War; he then divided all Patrimony and Kingdom, which he had in Mannow mia and Europe, among his Priends, alledging the S Alia was sufficient for bimself. And before an aty his Ships sailed he offered Sacrifices, Desiring ent tory in this War; in which he was to be the lom thou venger of Greece, so often invaded by the Periton whose Empire was grown old and fit for Cha in it being now high Time that the Turn should at the come about, when others who would use the Power, better should enjoy it; neither were of he Resolutions of his Army less presaging good For g do than his own, who forgetting their Wives and table dren, and the War which was so far from their Country, assured to themselves the Persians Gold, he Riches of the East, as if already in their pofon.

tio

un

eda 2715

0

ain

When they drew near the Afian Shore, Alexander threw a Dart, as into an Enemy's Country, and ing ashore in his Armour, vaulted twice or thrice the Air; he there again facrificed, praying, hat those Countries might willingly receive him as ing;' he did the same at Ilium, upon the Tombs hose who fell in the Trojan War; advancing afard towards the Enemy, he made Proclamation, hat none of his Soldiers should plunder, since they ght to spare their own Goods, and not destroy at they came to possess; In his Army were eller two thousand Foot, and four thousand sive red Horse, and a Fleet of one hundred and eighty he Ships; with which inconsiderable Force, it may wonderful, he durst undertake to overcome all oug Vestern World, especially since his Army did not ne B ft of flout young Men in the Flower of their with, but chiefly of old Soldiers, some of whom, Ardo e Laws of War, ought, for their Age, to have made discharged from further Service, being such as d all d both his Father and Grandfather, whereby Man now seemed select Masters of War, rather than ing the Soldiers, there being no File-Leader who was a sty Years old, the Order of the Camp being to the common-Wealth; therefore in the Battle, no thought of Flight, but of Victory: having no the Chain the Nimbleness of their Feet, but in the could atth of their Arms.

use the other side, Darius King of Persia, consi-were of his Strength, affirmed, that he would have od For g done by Policy or Circumvention, since it was and table to his Grandeur to steal a Victory, and their therefore Gold,

h

tri

lor

01

€ h a h

ion

m :

P

ar

hat

in o

hat

houle

er's

regal

Kin

ned

he Se

Phry

ing h

Alexa

mple.

Cord

dings.

h his

found

y of t

's Ap

the D.

therefore thought more honourable to admit the En my to enter his Country, than to fall upon him the borders: The first Battle was at the Plain of Ada frum, where an Army of fix hundred thousand Pa hans where overcome as much by the Policy of Ala ander, as the Courage of the Macedons; great the Slaughter of the Enemy, but he loft only n Footmen, and one Hundred and twenty Horse, who to encourage the rest, he caused to be honoural buried, and Statues were erected for them as for for memorable Commanders, bestowing great Privile on their Relations and Kindred: After this Victor the greatest part of Asia submitted to him. made many Wars with the Lieutenants of Dan whom he overcame not fo much by Arms, as Terror of his Name.

While he was thus Victorious he understood b Captive, that a Treason was contrived against him Alexander, Son in Law to Antipater (then the Ki Lieutenant in Macedonia) but fearing if he should him to Death it might occasion some Tumult in cedon, he only confined him to Prison in Bonds. ter this, he advanced to Gordium, fituate bety both the Phrygia's, which City he defired to be fter of, not so much for the Plunder, as because heard that in the Temple of Jupiter, which was in it, there was confecrated the Plough of God the Knots of whose Cords, if any could unloose Oracle of old had prefaged he should reign ov Afia: The Original of the Story was this: Gordius was ploughing in this Country with his great Flights of Birds of all Sorts flew round him, who going to the Southfayers and Aftro of the next City to know the meaning, he met Gate a Virgin of admirable Beauty, and afking

70

ar

- B - E

d

tv

e

or

ſe,

V

ol

t

2

Hundred

ether he should go to be resolved of his Doube. having some Knowledge herself in the Art by the tructions of her Parents, told him, 'That the Kingom and Government of that Country was prefaged o him thereby, and offered him to be a Companion his good Fortune, by giving herfelf in Marriage o him :' He was unwilling to refuse fo fair a Conon, which feemed the first Felicity of his King-n: After this Marriage, a Sedition arose among Phygians, and Counsel being asked, what would an End to these Mischiess, the Oracle replied, hat there was a Necessity of a King; and being in demanded, who he should be, Answer was made that they should make him King whom they hould find with a Plough entering into Jupir's Temple; Gardius was the Man, whom they fently faluted as their King, who confecrated regal Majesty in that Temple the Plough, by which Kingdom was conferred upon him. After him med his Son Mides, who being instructed by Orphens he Solemnities of worthipping their Gods, he filled Phrygia with Religion and Ceremonies, by which ing his Life, he was thought fafer than by Arms. Alexander foon took the City and entering the mple, enquired for the Plough; which being we him, when he could not discover the Ends of Cords, lying hid among the Multiplicity of the dings, he gave a violent Interpretation to the le of the Oracle, and cutting the Cords afunder h his Sword, the Knots were undone, and found the Ends lying undiscovered in the Myy of the Twifts. Mean while he heard of Da-'s Approach with a formidable Army, and fearthe Danger of the Streights of Taurus, he march'd edily over that Mountain, his Foot going five

of

Go

fte

in

tory

e f efco

H

one

and

ch (

the :

e w

Da

ne in anol

Lar

eprie

ved to emov

fho

ghter

r Qua

mirati

was

Hundred Furlongs without respite; coming to fa fus, and being taken with the pleasant River Cod running through the City, he difarmed, and, cover with Duft and Sweat, threw himself into it, whi was fo very cold that it caufed a Chillness and numbing in every Joint, which rendered him speed less, and made his Condition very dangerous; and more because he had received that Day from Can docia, that Philip his chief Physician, in whom put most Confidence, was corrupted by Darius to stroy him: However, the Case being desperate, ordered him to prepare a Potion, and having ceived the Cup, he delivered these Letters to h and fledfaftly beheld him as he drank the Physi and observing no Alteration in his Countenance reading them, he became more chearful, and in i Days he was perfectly recovered.

And now Darius advanced toward him with the ees of hundred thousand Foot, and one hundred the fand Horse; and tho' the Multitude of his Enen did fomewhat disturb him, yet when he rested what mighty Actions, and what notable Conqu over many Nations he had performed with as Men, he refumed his former Courage, but though necessary by no Means to delay fighting, left forious Discouragement might happen to his Soldiers, therefore riding through the midst of his Troops, as Bar by several Speeches and Orations, endeavour'd to a firm their Valour, and telling them, 'The World at a no Soldiers comparable to them, and that this Battle would put an End to their Labours, in the their Glory and Renown would Remain for everake I monishing his Men not to forget the antient Glory Fame the Persian Empire, and of their everlasting Po

yd

vei

vhi

dl eed

d

a

m 0

e,

yfi ce

1 fi

古古古 let

qu

ps, 0.0

d 3

.

eve

,

ory

of it which was granted them by the immor-Gods.

fter this the Battle was fought with great Refolu-, in which both Kings were wounded, and the tory was doubtful till Darius fled, whereupon e followed a great Slaughter of the Perfians, escore and ten Thousand Foot, and ten Thou-Horse being flain, and sorty thousand taken oners; of the Macedonians were flain one hundand thirty Foot, and one hundred and fifty Horfe; ch Gold and other rich Moveables were found the Perfian Camp, and among the Captives e were the Mother and Wife of Darius, and his Daughters; to comfort whom, when Alexander ne in Person with some Soldiers, they embracing another, expecting present Death, made a screak-

Lamentation, then humbling themselves to the eprieve till they had buried Darius; Alexander ved to their Pity, assured them he was alive, and emove from them the Fear, of Death, commanded should be honoured, as Queens, and that the sighters should chuse them Husbands according to agh r Quality: After which observing the Riches and cious Furniture of Darius, he was posses'd with miration, and then first begun to delight in Luxus Banquets and Feasts, and to be tempted by Beauties of Persinoe his Captive, on whom he at a Son, named Hercules. But confidering Da-was yet alive, he commanded Parmenio to feize n the Persian Fleet, and sent other Commanders ake Possession of some Cities in Afia. Who soon vered themselves up with valt Sums of Gold, upon Fame of this great Victory.

He then advanced into Syria, where many Kin of the East with Fillets and Mitres met him, some whom he received as Friends, others he deprived their Kingdoms, preferring new Kings, and amount others Abdolomins was by him chosen King of Sinia, who before lived miserably, his only Employment being to scour Ditches, and water Garden Alexander rejecting the Nobility Jest they should in pute their Royalty to their Birth, and not to his 6 nerofity.

The Citizens of Tyre fending him a weighty Crow of Gold, on pretence of gratifying him: The G was gratefully accepted, and the Ambassadors we told, He awould come thither bimfelf, and pay bis Vo to Hercules; who alledging he might perform to better in the old Town of Tyre, in the ancient Chun he was fo incenfed, that he threatened utterly to stroy their City; and immediately drawing his An to the Island, was resolutely received by the Tyris who depended on Affistance from Carthage, but failing, they were not long after furprized by Ta chery, and destroyed: He then took Rhodes, El from Cicilia, upon Composition, and resolved to the Temple of Jupiter Ammon, to enquire of fur Events, and his own Original, fince his Mother Of pias had confessed to his Father Philip, that A ander was not begot by him, but by a vast great pent; and Philip, a little before his Death, ope declared, That Alexander quas not bis Son; and vorced Olympias as guilty of Incontinence. ander therefore being ambitious of being a God, to free his Mother from Difgrace, fent some bef hand with Prefents to the Priefts, ordering them Answers they should return; so that entering Temple, they instantly saluted him as the Son

ity,

s and

d, T all L d In

worf ice h

the y of Dari off

the redee

ught e; t

ne a

in for hund He de He de

d to

d

10

Sid

G

0

GWO

un

0

An

ria

t t

Ti

 E_{I}

fut

Ol

ope

ad

3, efi

1

ng Son An

feffed

mon, who being joyful of this Adoption by this ity, commanded that Jupiter Ammon should be emed his Father : He then demanded, Whether full venge had been taken of his Father's Murderers. It s answered, That bis Father could neither be killed die, but the Revenge for King Phlip was fully formed. In Answer to a third Demand, it was d. That both Victory in all Wars, and the Possession all Lands was granted to bim. His Commanders I Intimates were likewise enjoin'd by the Priests worship him as a God, and not as a King. From ace he was possessed with wonderful Insolence and de, altogether estranging himself from his former iliarity, learn'd of the Gracians and Macedonians: then built Alexandria and fettled a Colony of cedons there, commanding it should be the chief y of Egypt.

Darius flying to Babylon, fent Letters to Alexanoffering him a vaft Sum of Money for redeemthe captive Ladies; who returned Answer, That redeem them be must not only give bis Money but bis pire. Darius foon after writ again, propofing his ughter in Marriage, and a great part of the Eme; but Alexander writ back, That he gave him only at was bis own before; and commanded him to ne as a Suppliant to him, and to permit the Conror to dispose of the Kingdom at his own Plea-: Darius hereby despairing of Peace, prepared in for War, and advanced against Alexander with r hundred thousand Foot, and one hundred thoud Horse: In his March he was informed his Wife s dead, and that Alexander had been extremely d to her and the reft, lamenting her death, and fling at her Funeral, and that he often went to nfort his Mother and Daughters, whereat he con-

aced

db

713 nds

ers :

et th

to c foug

mor ougl

Silve

then

donia

erec

dver

die,

as fh ould

mpe

own

rogre

vide

many

the

Way

Alex

ifficu

app'c

ange

attle b

the

urft re

mar

ervitu

fessed, 'He was truly conquered, since after so m Battles his Enemy had likewise overcome him * Kindness, and that it was some Comfort to in his Misery to be subdued by so gallant an Ad ' fary,' He thereupon writ a third Time to giving him many Thanks for his civil Respects to Family, offering his other Daughter, and the gra part of his Kingdom, even to the River Euphn and thirty thousand Talents for the other Capting Alexander answered; 'That giving Thanks to · Enemy was superfluous, neither had he done ' Thing either for Flattery or Fear of future Eve or in hope of Peace, but out of the Greatne his Mind, whereby he had learned to contend ag the Forces, but not the Calamities of his Ener He promised to allow the same Grants to * rius, if he would be his Second, not his Eq but as the World could not be governed by Suns, no more could it endure the Government * two fuch great Empires in a fafe Condition; t fore, faid be, come if you will, and this very furrender yourself to me, or else prepare for tle the next, wherein you have no reason to pro yourfelf any better Success than you have als found.

Next Day both Armies flood ready to fight which Instant Alexander possess'd with too much fell into a deep Sleep, and was hardly waked by menio; and all admiring that he, who usually little, should now be overcome therewith, in fo Danger, he replied, 'That his being delivered a great Fear was the Occasion of it, since no was to fight with all the Forces of Darius at being before afraid the War would be de should the Persians have divided their Army.'

o m

him

to

Ad

to h

s to

phri

to ne

Eve

ne

ag

0

Eq by

ry

pro

h (

y

d

101

ld

e the Battle both Armies, viewed each other, the acedonians admired the Multitude, greatness of Body, d beautiful Armour of their Enemies, The Perns were amazed to think how often fo many thounds of them had been overcome with so sew Solers: Alexander bid his Soldiers, 'Not be troubled at the multitude or Strength of their Enemie, but to consider this was the third Time they had fought with them; and that they were never the more valiant for flying away fo often; that they ought to despise an Army shining with Gold and Silver, fince their Iron would foon purchase it to themselves.' Then both Armies engaging the Malonians, in contempt of the Enemy to often contered, threw themselves upon the Swords of their dverfaries, and the Persians defired rather manfully. die, than be again defeated, feldom more Blood as shed in any Fight; Darius seeing his Forces routed ould willingly have died himself, but those next him impelled him to fly; some persuaded him to break own the Bridge of Cydnus, and stop the Enemy's ogress; who answered, 'That he would not provide for his Safety to dishonourably, by exposing to many Thousands of his own Soldiers to the Fury of the Enemy, who ought to be allowed the fame Way to escape which lay open to himself."

Alexander was still personally present in the greatest inficulties, and where the Enemy stood firmest, he app'd in amongst them, and made the most pressing langers more his own than his Soldiers. In this attle he gained to himself the whole Empire of Asia, the fifth Year of his Reign, so happily, that none wish rebel, the Persons whose Empire had continued o many Years, now patiently endured the Yoke of ervitude. His Soldiers refresh'd and rewarded, the

C 4

he h

mea not

mor

dred

near

way

Life

he I

urn

was,

ind

f Sc

vhole

olem

he R

Alexa

nd v affec

uffic

his

nd,

n a

her.

erab

nted

COT

ong i

Alexa

porf

iding

g Co

r hi

over

u les

Booty being fo great that they were thirty Days dividing it, he found hid eleven thousand Talent and then took Persepolis, the chief Seat of the Kingdom, renowned for many Years, and full of the Spoils of the World, which were now discovered the Destruction thereof. At this Place, eight hund dred Greeks, who had been formerly taken Captive the Persans came to Alexander with their dismensered Bodies, desiring him as he had delivered Green so he would likewise them from the Cruelty of the Enemies; the King granted them to return home but they rather chose to be seated in some Plana tion there, lest instead of Joy, they should present a their parents the lamentable and loathed Spectacles themselves.

Mean Time Darius was feized on by his own Kin men, and fetter'd in golden Chains, in a Parthi Town, called Taneas, thinking thereby to purcha Favour of the Conqueror; Alexander pursuing his full Speed, came to the fame Town the next Da and was informed that Darius was by Night carrie away in a close Waggon; therefore ordering his Arm to follow, he purfued him with only feven thousan Horse, encountring several Dangers by the Way and having run many Miles without gaining any la telligence of him, he staid to refresh his Troop when one of his Soldiers going to the next Sprin found Durius there, bleeding through many Wound but yet alive, who observing the Soldier to be a Pa fian Captive, he faid, 'It was fome Comfort to his in his deplorable Misfortunes, that he should spea to one who understood him, and should not breat . forth his last Words in vain : He defired him to n present to Alexander, 'His real Sense of the man Obligations received from him, which he was for nd ben en he

nti

2 ha his Day

ay

oop

rin

Pa hi

per real

0 7

man

for

he had not the Happiness to return; fince he had demeaned himself toward his Mother and Children, not as an Enemy, but a King; and that he was more happy in an Adversary than in his own Kindred, fince Alexander had spared the Lives of his near Relations, whereas his own Life was taken way by his Kinsman, to whom he had given both Life and Kingdoms, for which he should receive he Recompence due to a Conqueror. All the Reurn he could make him for his repeated Favours, was, as a dying Man, to befeech the Powers above, and the Powers below, and the Gods that dispose Scepters, to bellow upon him the Empire of the vhole World. For himself he desired rather a olemn than fumptuous Feneral; as to his Death, he Revenge ought to be exemplary, it being not only flexander's, but the common Cause of all Kings, nd would be as dishonourable as dangerous to be affed over, fince hereby he might both declare his uffice, and procure his future Safety;' and in hope his performing it, he gave his Soldier his right nd, the only Pledge of the Faith of a King, and n after gave up the Ghost. Alexander coming ther, and hearing this Relation, having beheld the erable Condition wherein he was, with Tears lanted his Death, so unworthy his former Grandeur, commanded his Body to be buried like a King ong the Tombs of his Predecessors.

flexander after this honoured the Soldiers he lost pursuit of Darius, with great Funeral Expences, iding fifteen thousand Talents among their surving Companions. He now received Intelligence, that is Departure, almost all Greece combined to over their Liberty in his Absence, the Lacedemo-us leading the Van, who despissing the Peace with

Philip

Philip and Alexander, Agis their King became Ge tal of this War, which Insurrection Antipater pressed in the Beginning, though with great Bloods on both fides. Agis making terrible flaughter of Enemies, and sometimes driving whole Troops be After the Death of Darius, Alexander's S diers did not doubt but the War was quite finish expecting nothing but a speedy Return to their of Country, and in their Imagination already embra their Wives, and Children, when Alexander calling General Council, declared unto them. . That t had gained nothing by fo many famous Victor · if their more caffern Enemies were yet untouch neither did he make War to conquer the l'en · but the Empire of Darius, and that those were to · purfued that fled away, and revolted from hi Having by this Speech revived the Courage of Men, he subdued the Maridons and Hircanians; this Place Thalestris, or Minothea Queen of the A zons addressed herself to him, attended with the hundred thousand Women, having travelled twe five Days thro' many terrible Nations, only, as said, To have a Son by so great a Conqueror. Countenance, and the Cause of her coming, were Subject of much Wonder, both for the Strangene her Habit and Requelt. To fatisfy which, the I took thirty Days leifure, and when she thought was with Child, she took her Leave and departed.

Alexander now assumed the Habit and Diades the King of Persia, as if transformed into the Fall and Culloms of the Conquered; and to prevent a commanded his Friends likewise to wear long to Gold and Purple; and to imitate their Riot he divided the Night by Turns among Troops of cubines, admired both for Birth and Beauty, ad

th

er

hic

an

er

bui

e f

ien

arry

ake

reti

th

rn

ne .

ble

K

an i

en,

ie v

his (

Dig

on o

ich,

Tion

y cor

ng t he int

fts, c

ends,

dor

ught

inion

ally i roy (

Pari

di

of

oef

5 5

if

. 0

ora

lin

Por

uch

en!

e to hi

of

ns;

th

, ad

ereto Feasts and Plays to complete his Luxury : hich caused great Indignation among his Comanders, to fee him fo far degenerated from his Faer Philip, that he did not care to have his own puntry fo much as mentioned, being overcome with e fame Vices which were the Overthrow of his nemies; yet he politically permitted his Soldiers to arry these Women which were their Captives, to ake the War less tedious, and their Desires to abate returning home, and likewife that Macedonia might the less exhausted with Recruits, if young Soldiers rn in the Camp should succeed their old Fathers. ne Parthians, being next subdued, Andragoras, a ble Persian was made their Governor, from whom Kings of Parthia derived their Original. In the an time Alexander exercised his Rage on his own en, more like an Enemy than a King, especially on ie who upbraided him for subverting the Customs his Country, for which Offence old Parmenio, next Dignity to the King, and his Son Philotas, tho' two on other Pretences, were put to Death; upon as ich, Murmurs arose throughout the Camp in comfion to these Innocents, and secret Whispers, that vere y could hope for little better to themselves; which enel ng told Alexander, he declared he would fend ne K ne into Macedonia to give an Account of his Conaght ests, defiring his Soldiers to write freely to their ed. ends, who were glad of fuch an Opportunity; done, he demanded the Letters to be fecretly aden Fah ight him, whereby having discovered every Man's ent B mion of him, he reduced those who had writ feally into one Company, with an Intent either to ig R Riot roy or distribute them into Colonies in the furof the Parts of the World.

He then subdued the Dracons, and divers other Nat one, ons inhabiting at the Foot of Mount Caucafus, who Beffus, one of the Favourites of Darius, was brough bound in Chains, who not only berrayed but killed his King, whom Alexander delivered to the Broth of Darius to be tormented in revenge of his Tre fon ; and to leave his Name in those remote Cou tries, he built a City which he named Alexandria the River Tanais, within seventeen Days, making a Wa about it fix Miles compais, and transplanting think the People of three Cities adjacent, built by Cyru he likewise built twelve Cities amongst the Bactria and Sogdians, wherein he placed all whom he for feditious in his Army; after this, one Holy-day called his chief Captains together to a Banquet, who iring mention being made of the Exploits performed Philip, Alexander preferred himself above his I ther, and extolled his own Atchievements to the Ski the greatest part of his Guests affenting thereto, b Clytus an old Commander, upon Confidence of King's Friendship, still persisted to magnify the tions of Philip; which so enflamed Alexander to fnatching, a Spear from one of the Guards, he kill him at the Feaft, and infulted over his dead Bod but his Pation being abated, he heartily repented that rath Action, lamenting his innocent old Frid would have done Execution upon himself for the far inded, had not his Friend prevented him; yet melting Tears, he embraced the dead Body, handled Wounds, and confessed to him his Madness, as alive, and taking the Spear again into his Hands had certainly flain himself, if the Attendants had in erposed. This Resolution to die continued a tence him feveral Days after; the Remembrance of mitte

ief urif ung o br

H cure tion Bar es ;

he res I ys f vaile

reby om 1, 2 ly pr The l his n, be who efts a fue t tted to to red; his p benes w ion, of

ep UB E O

N

-21

ia

out 1

he

1

Ski

ft

A

cill

lod ted

rich

fan g is

ad

. .

of

Nu

rie, who was Sister to Clytus, still renewed his ief for making her so cruel a Recompence for her wishment she had given him, and that being a ing Man and a Conqueror, he should requite her o brought him up in her Arms, with Blood and Mur-. He then reflected on the Disgrace this Act would cure him both in his own Army and the conquered. tions, appearing now more terrible among his Friends Banquet, than being armed in the Face of his Enes; then Parmenio and Philotas, and all the Prinhe had dellroyed in Macedon, representing themves to his Memory, for which he abstained four ys from eating a bit of Meat, till he was at last vailed upon by the Prayers of the whole Army, iring him not fo to refent the Death of one, as reby to destroy them all, nor to forsake those om he had brought into the utmost Parts of the f, among barbarous and cruel Nations, fufficily provoked by his Invation.

The Persuasions of Califibenes, the Philosopher, his familiar Acquaintance, prevailed much upon n, being bred up with him in the School of Arifferle, whom he fent for on purpose to record his Conelis and Victories. Having therefore resolved to fue the War, he took several Nations, who subted to him, into his Protection; yet not long afto render himfelf still more hateful, he comnded, That be awould not only be aworshipped but red; which was the only Thing he had forbidden his proud Imitation of the Perfun Kings. Caas benes was the most resolute Opposer of this Inno-ds, ion, which ruined both him and divers others Prinof Macedon, who were all put to Death under tence of Treason; yet would not the Macedons mit to Adoration, but retained their ancient Custom

in

ne I ner

nder

ker

ome

eive reile

onte or, ecte

ie o e th

ver:

for

vo h iers

icto

ears lait

ing

Age

pme me

is o

ial !

crefe

Bodi cetto

yet.

of faluting their King. He next marched into India to bind his Empire with the Ocean, and the further East; and to make himself and his Army more n nowned, he covered the Trappings of their Horse and the Arms of his Soldiers with Silver; when he not came to the City of Nysa, the Inhabitants made Resistance, because of their religious Confidence in C the Affistance of their God Bacchus, by whom the City was built, which he commanded should be span that he might follow the Footsteps of their Deity he then led his Army to see the holy Hill of Bacch which was cloathed with Vines and Ivy fo natural and elegantly, as if adorned by the Hand and le dustry of the Planter; from hence he marched to the Hills of Dedales and the Kingdom of Queen Cleophi who yielding to him without Resistance, received ba her Kingdom, redeeming it, by exposing herself his Pleafure, and obtaining that by Wantonness whi she could never have recovered by Force of Arms the called her Son then begotten by .him, Alexand who after enjoyed the Kingdom of the Indians; was afterwards called by her Subjects, The Re

Having march'd almost thro' all India he came length to a Rock, as wonderful for its Bigness its Ascent, into which many Nations fled for & curity, and understood that Hercules was by an Earl quake hindered from taking it; being thereup transported with Ambition, to transcend the Action and Labours of Hercules, he with almost infinite Di culty and Danger became Mafter of it, and took into Protection all the Nations thereabout. One of the Ind Kings, named Porus, was as admirable for his Streng of Body as Greatness of Mind, who having Not of Alexander's Advance, prepared an Army to ent his g rthe

e re

orfe

nl

ce i th

pare eity cchu rall

I

ophi

bad elf

v hid

rms znde

Ro

me es

r S

Cart

eup Ctio

Di

to Indi

reng

Vou

ente

o th

in him; the Battles being joined, he demanded of e Macedons their King, being resolved, as a private nemy, to fight with him Hand to Hand. Alexnder made no delay to answer him; and in the first ncounter, falling head-long to the Ground, his der forse being killed under him, he was preserved by he Concourse of his Guard. Porus, almost covered ith Blood from the many Wounds he received, was ken Prisoner, and had such Indignation to be over-ome that the he had Quarter given, he would re-ive no Sustenance, nor suffer his Wounds to be ressed, being with much Difficulty persuaded to be ontented to live. Alexander, in honour to his Vaur, fent him back fafe to his own Kingdom; he rected there two Cities, one called Nicea, and e other Bucephali, after the Name of his Horse; e then overthrew the Armies of the Adrestians, and ivers other People, and marching to the Euphitans, found they attended his coming with an Army of vo hundred thousand Horse, whereupon all his Solers being tired, as well by the Number of their ictories as their Labours, humbly befought him with ears, 'To put a Period to his Wars, and now at last to think of returning to their Country, entreating him to confider the Years of his Soldiers whose Age could scarce suffice to carry them home again." ome shewed their grey Hairs, others their Wounds, me their Bodies consumed with Sickness, others with is of Blood, which they had freely shed in contial Warfare, both with himself and Father, and erefore defired, 'That the Remains of their worn Bodies might be buried in the Graves of their Anceftors; and however, if he would not spare them yet, that he would spare himself, and not to tempt his good Fortune by venturing it too far.' Moved with with these just Petitions, he, to give an End to Victories, commanded his Camp to be made excee ing magnificent, that by the large Extent there the Enemy should be terrified, and his Fame admin in Future Ages: his Soldiers never undertook a Thing more readily, and then falling upon their for midable Enemy with all their Might, they foon a that undisciplined Multitude to Flight, and willty, great Joy returned to their Quarters,

From thence he marched to the River Acefines, which he failed to the Ocean, where two Nations, whom Hercules was the Founder, submitted to him from whence he failed to the Sycambrians, who wi fourscore and three thousand armed Foot, and the Wa score thousand Horse, were ready to receive his es & Having overthrown them in the Field, he came their chief City, and being himself the first Manti fealed the Walls, when he found them unguate vere he leaped down into the City alone without a ngth Guard. The Enemy feeing him fingle, with a guards and Shout, ran toward him from every Place, hoping in to the Death of one Man to end the Wars of all the World, and revenge the Quarrel of fo many M Atch tions. Alexander resolutely resisted them, and for ster t alone against so many Thousands. It is incredi gave alone against so many Thousands. It is incredit to be spoken, that neither the Multitude of his Fo es to the Fury of their Weapons, nor the Cries they me t. It to encourage one another, could any Way affright to the alone killed and Put to Flight fo many, but etheil length finding himself overpowered, he got to tremar Body of a Tree close under the Wall, where he alo thou Time futtained their Fary, till his Soldiers und old So standing his Danger, leap'd down to his Assistant much many of whom were slain, and the Battle continue had n doubtful until, the Walls being beat down, chasting

ble

fb

hle the

n. The

be

him nak

be ( ing

expir

am, ple Army came to his Rescue. In this Fight bethat with an Arrow under the Breaft, he fainted h loss of Blood, yet fought so long with one Knee the Ground, till he had killed two who wounded

The Cure was more grievous than the Wound, being at last recovered, though with extreme Diflty, he fent Polypercan with his Army to Babylon, himself going with a select Party aboard his Fleet nake further Discovery of the Ocean, and landing he City of King Ambigerus, the Inhabitants being he could not be overcome by the Sword, oned their Darts, wherewith they forced him from Walls, and killed many of his Soldiers, among rs Ptolomy was deadly wounded and being ready expire, an Herb was shewn to Alexander in 2 am, which being found and steeped in his Drink, vered Ptolomy and the greater Part of the Army; ngth the City being taken, he returned to his and facrificed to the Ocean, imploring a happy n to his Country, and at length arrived at the th of the River Indus, where, as a Monument of Atchievements, he built the City of Barle. fou

15, oin

hi

ne

n ti arde

t gn

ng

all y N

redi

Fo

m bth

but

to alo

und

ittan

ntin

VD,

Wh

fter this, he married Statira, Durius's Daughter, gave the most noble Virgins of all Nations for es to his Princes, thereby to mitigate his own He then called his Army together, and prod to pay all their Debts, that they might carry e their Booty and Pay entire, which magnificence remarkable for the vaftness of the Sum? Twenty thousand Talents being laid out in this Affair, old Soldiers being thus fent home, the younger much displeased, and began to mutiny, that had not the same Favour; some of whom Alexchastized, and persuaded others; but at length find

t

ter

h

mf

ter C

e C

gro

co

en

r Ol

Brot

finding Words would not prevail, he leaped that from his Throne, among the armed Multitude, feized twelve of the chief Authors of the Sedin hurried them to execution, none daring to offer least Resistance. Calling then together the Per Soldiers, he extolled their conflant Fidelity both himself and their former Kings, and declared would now commit himself unto their Custody, no longer to the Macedons; and accordingly devore a thousand of them for his Life-Guard, ming also several Regiments of Persians among the M dons, to learn their Discipline; which his Armyt fion so much to Heart, that, all weeping, they repaire reason him, befeeching him rather to punish them than to fors fuch a severe Affront upon them, by which Submits A they prevailed fo far, that he dismis'd and fent beend to Macedonia eleven thousand of his old Soldiers, at his their Pay was continued to them in their Return, a rvice they had fill ferved.

Returning to Babylon, from the furthest Con ered the Ocean, he had notice that Ambassadors from Sting thage and other Cities in Africa, as also from & th th Sicily, France, Sardinia and divers Cities in attended his Arrival, the Terror of his Name his to fo posses'd the World, that all Nations submitted Pois him as a King deftined to be their Ruler. For ass, o Cause, approaching Babylon, to keep as it we er, A. Parliament of the whole World, some Magician d, H. wifed him not to enter that City, affirming it sout the be fatal to him; therefore declining it, he is such a fide to Berfia, a City heretofore unpeopled of Trea other fide Euphrates, where he was importune the Anaxarchus the Philosopher, to despise the Prograve of the Magicians as false and uncertain; and is per he certain, and if proceeding from Destiny or N ting the th

d d

ng

y t ire

to

mi

rt b

rs,

n,

t to be prevented. Going therefore to Babylon, ter a while he again prepared a folemn Feast, which had for fome time intermitted, where he devoted mielf absolutely to Mirth, both Day and Night; ter which Theffalus his Physician, invited him and Companions to another Debauch; where taking Cup into his Hand, in the middle of his Draught groaned as if he had been struck through with a ord, and his Body became so extream tender, that complained, if but touched, as though he had en wounded; his Friends faid, this Discase was ocfioned by Excess of Wine, though it were really eason, the Infamy whereof the Power of his Sucfors did suppress. The Author of this Treason s Antipater, who, when he beheld his dearest ends, commanded to death, his Son-in-law flain, d himself who had performed such considerable vice in Greece, difrespected and accused by his Moer Olympias of many Infolences, and likewise concoal ered his late Severity to his Lieutenants, and exting the same Treatment; to make sure Work in 8 th the King, he suborned his Son Cassander, with Brother Philip and Yolla, who used to minister to in his, to poison him; so great was the Strength of nitte Poison, that it could not be contained in Iron, For als, or any Thing but a Horse's Hoof; Four Days we er, Alexander finding Death certainly approaching, it wout thirty Years oid After which he pacified his Sol-ie to swho were ready to mutiny, suspecting he perished don Treason; being therefore brought into the High tune ice of the City, he admitted all into his Presence, Prograve them his right Hand to kifs; and when all and i pt, he appeared without the least Trouble com-

hei

dor

2,2 ofo

Cou

nce

g 1

ce o

ary

wb

y ga

ed b

Sub

r, be being now as invincible against Death, as forme against his Enemies. The Soldiers departing he ale his Friends about him, If they thought they for have another King like him. When all holding the Peace, he confidently prefaged as if he had feen with his Eyes, That Macedon hould lofe much Bl in his Quarrel, and many thou fand Lives would be crificed at his Funeral. He then commanded his Bo to be buried in the Temple of Jupiter Ammon, then fainting away, his Attendants demanded wh he would conflitute Heir of his Empire; he only Swered, To the most Worthy; so great was the gour of his Mind, that though he left behind bis Son Hercules, his Brother Aridrus, and his W Roxana big with Child, yet forgetting those Obli tions, he only nominated The most Worthy to be Heir ; as if it were unreasonable that any but a liant Man should succeed a Conqueror. With the Words, as if the Spirit of Discord had been among them, his chief Captains inflantly grew lous of each other, and privately forgot to gain Favour of the Soldiers to themselves : on the fi Day being speechless, he gave the Ring off his I ger to Perdiecas, which for the present pacified growing Diffentions; for though by Voice he not nominated Heir, yet by Choice he seemed to So. Alexander deceased, being thirty three Years one Month old, a Man endowed with a mighty rit above other Men, whose Mother Olympias dress when he was conceived, that the had Commerce a God, and by his Actions he after feemed to above the Condition of mortal Men; there appe also many Presages of his future Greatness on his B day, for two Eagles flying all that Day round a the character

Bl

be

Bo

wh

y

el

1

W

bli

be

2 t

n

e fi

ty stream

ppe is Bi Palace, fettled at last upon the Battlements of his her's Court, feeming to prognofficate to him the Empires of Europe and Alia, and on the fame y his Father received the glad Tidings of two tories, one in Illyria, and another in the Olympick e. He was of admirable Apprehension and Lear-, and was educated under Arifforle, the most famous ofopher. Being invested in his Father's Kinghe commanded himself to be called, King of Countries, and Lord of the World; fo great a Connce had his Soldiers in his good Fortune, that he g present, they feared not, tho' unarmed, the ce of an Enemy. He never encountered any Adary whom he did not overcome, nor belieged any which he did not take, nor invaded any Nation whom he did not triumph, and therefore defery gained the Name of Alexander the Great, and of the Worthies of the World. Yet was at length deed by the Villainy and Treafon of his own Friends Subjects. He lived in the Year of the World , before Christ 337 Years.

Julius

ULIUS CESAR,

CRE AT Julius Cæsar next attain'd the Name Of the Third Worthy; whose immortal Fame, Romains still fresh in the Records of Time;
He to the Empire of the World did climb:
And what he conquer'd by his Saword in Fight, He with his Pen did elegantly write:
At length, through many Wounds, his Soul hence stel,
And he who ne'er before was conquered In War; he who with Slaughter strew'd So many Lands, with his own Blood embru'd The Seat of wronged Justice; and fell down A Sacrifice t'appease the incens'd Gown.

7ULI

ITS. ne orce no · I ful, al n he my, Int Kinf d ou ce y wh uctio ve fo

in untry

er, a s De

Discon

e he a

to ma

ithdre

dy me

ed O

taken

forty

ULIUS CASAR, of the noble Family of the Julij ; so called as some think from Julius Ascas, the Son of Aneas, from whom they were amious to have descended; and Cafar, because it s faid he was cut out of his Mother's Womb; others derive it a Cafo Elephanto; from his andfather's killing an Elephant. He was but 16 rs old when his Father died, and yet was defigned next Year to be High-Prieft of Jutiter, and having orced himself from his first Wife, whose Birth not fo eminent as his Fortune; he married Cora Daughter of Cinna, who had been four times ful, by whom he had his Daughter Julia; Sylla all possible Arguments to have separated him her, but not prevailing, he purfued him as an my, and defigned to artest him: At length by Intercession of the Vestal Virgins, and some of Kinsmen, he obtained Pardon, though Sylla then out by Way of Prediction, 'Take him then ce you will needs have him, but know the Person whom you have been so zealous, will be the deuction of the Nobility and common Interest we ve so earnestly defended; for I assure you, there in Cafar many Marij, or Disturbers of their untry.' He first bore Arms in Afia, as a Voer, and afterward in Cilicia; but hearing of Death, and hoping for new Troubles from Discontents of M. Lepidus, he returned to Rome, e he accused C. Dolabella of Extortion ; but unto make good his Charge, and Delabella acquit, ithdrew to Rhodes, both to avoid Envy, and by more privately under A. Molon, the most ceed Orator of those Times; in his Passage he taken by Pyrates, in whose Hands he conforty Days, with great perturbation of Mind, fo Nig

wa it v

1 60

epa

es, 1

Date:

n to bein

with

was

ch :

the

triva

or I

not e ket p

itol 1

ple n

Beaf

ht in ch we

s, tha

lished

: has

get the

and

Was

n after

mana

with only his Physician, and two Servants, have fent away the rest to procure his Ransom; we bringing sifty talents, he was set ashore; to recopence their Kindness, he put immediately again Sea, pursues, overtakes, and executes these Robbe as he had often threatened them in jest, when her their Prisoner.

In the mean time Mithridates making great vaftation in the neighbouring Countries, Cafar this ing it dishonourable to lye still while his Allies in diffress, he pass'd from Rhodes to Asia, and rai what Forces he could, beat Mithridates's Gove out of those Provinces, and confirmed several in Allegiance, who before were inclined to revolt, first Dignity bestowed on him by the People, was Tribune, which Office he strenuously maintained. ing Queffor, he made funeral Orations, according Custom, in Praise of Julia his Aunt, and Con his Wife, wherein he spake thus of his Extract My Aunt Julia by the Mother's fide was desce from Kings, and by the Father's the was allied 4 the Gods, for from Ancus Marcius, the Marcii, were called Reges, or Kings, are derived, and ' Julij were derived from Verus. In our H therefore we have the Majesty of Kings, wh the most potent among Men and the Veneration the Gods, who are more powerful than they'. Quaffor, the Government of the farthest Part of fell to his Lot; going his Circuit to keep Com Justice, he came to Cadiz, where observing Image of Alexander in the Temple of Hercula fetched a deep Sigh for having done nothing res able at that Age, wherein he had conquete World; upon which Contemplation he beg be immediately dismissed, designing for Rome, fome greater Enterprize. He likewise dreamed Night before, that he had ravished his Mother, was extremely exalted; when the Interpreters told it was a Presage of his Dominion over the whole th, fince the Mother, which seemed to be violated, the nothing but the Earth, the common Mother of eparting therefore out of Spain before his Com? on was expired, he went amongst the Latin Cos, who were at that Time prefling for their Free-; and, if not prevented, had certainly excited n to Sedition. Yet this did not discourage him. being made Ædil, he was suspected of Conspiwith M. Craffus, Sylla and Antonius; Their Dewas to fet upon the Senate, and to cut the Throats ach as they thought convenient. Crassus was to been Dictator, and Cafar Master of the Horse. the Republick to be fettled according to their trivance; but at the Day appointed, either for or Remorfe, Craffus absented himself, their Place not executed. In his Ædilfbip he beautified the ket places and Halls of Justice, and adorned the itol with Galleries, that from thence the common ple might be Spectators of the Beating of the Beafts, Stage Plays, and fuch other Divertions as ht infinuate his Generofity toward them: To ch were added, Sword players in fo great Numthat his Enemies, alarm'd at their Multitude, lished an Edict to restrain them to a certain Numhaving hereby obliged the People, he intended get the Government of Egypt to himself by their and when the Nobility prevented him therein was much disturbed; yet by his Liberality he after obtained the Office of High Prieft, which managed with extravagant Profusench. The

1

of

our ing ula ret

1,

The Conspiracy of Cataline being discover'd, the Senate generally condemning him and his complices to Death, Cafar only was the Man endeavoured to moderate the Sentence into Impri ment and Confication, which he pres'd with much Heat, that had not Cato's Oration recolled them, the whole Senate had complied. Yet he terward opposed the Execution of the Decree that obstinacy that he was threatened to be kill'd the Guards, who fet their Swords to his Throat, frightned him into Compliance. He next affe fome Privileges in behalf of the People, contrary the Mind of the Senate, who thereupon forbid to proceed in executing them; of which he took Notice, but went on, till some Soldiers were on to interrupt him. Then he dismissed his Offe and laid by his purple Robe, retiring privately his own House, as if submitting to the Ini of that Time. Two Days after, the People of to him in great Throngs, and in a tumultuous offered him their Affistance, but he appealed t beyond all Expectation, and the Senate, (who.) dealy met about that Commotion) fent him Th by some principal Persons: He was also re-in into the Senate, Commended, Restored, and the eree of his Sufpension revoked.

He fell again into fome Trouble upon an A fation of being concerned in Cataline's Confpin bid in but appealing to the Testimony of Cicero, he have eleared of it, and his Accuser sned, his Goods so pting and himself almost torn in Pieces by the People. Disp a short Time he was made Consol with Bibelus, ghter some affronts being put upon him by the Senate ter, a contracted a strict Friendship with Pompey, at ing G time at Desiance with the Senate, to whom he is the was made.

fut fen folf nde aft it find

1 C

e of pair onti Ca ch h

s, ti or s, b Ve

All Po

pon oft. Abate , he

Difp

mbly.

d,

is an s pni

rich

he

e I

l'd

t, affe

rary

ook

ord Office

tely nie

e o

The

the

A

oir

he

le.

us,

ate

-10

Craffus, and joining all together, nothing for future could be transacted in the State but by the fent of all three. After his Promotion to the folfhip, a Law called Lex Agrania being pronded, and his Companion Bibulus protesting aoff it, Cafar violently drove him out of the Place; finding upon his Complaint of that Violence, that e of the Senate durst move in his Behalf, in utter pair he retired immediately to his Hoose, where ontinued all the rest of his Consulship; so that Cefar had the fole Administration of Affairs, th he managed with that uncontroulable Arbitrais, that fome merry Citizens upon subscribing any or Record, writ thus, Not when Cafar and Bis, but when Julius and Crofar were Confuls; and Verles were disperfed. It was the are, where his whole

Non Bibulo quidquam, &c.

All Things of late, Great Calar atts alone, Poor Bibulus is out of Fastion grown.

pon all occasions he extended his Power to the off. The Farmers of the Revenues potitioning Abatement because of the Hardness of their Barnes, he abated them a third Part. admonthing them bid more warily for the Future. He caused Cate hauled violently out of the Senate, for only inputing him; and others were made sensible of his Displeasure. He then married Calpburnia, the ghter of Piso, by which Alliance he still grew ter, and had a Triumph allowed him for coning Gallia, now France; with which Advance-the was so elated, that a while after, in a full mbly, he beasted he had laid his Enemies on their D 2.

Backs. His Atchievements, during the nine Yo wherein he had the principal Command of the An were generally these: He reduced into a Province Part of France which lies between the Pyra Mountains, the Alps, the Mountains Gerbenna, Rhine and the Rhofne, containing three thousand hundred Miles in Circumference, imposing a vaft I bute upon all the great Towns and Cities; he the first of all the Romans who built a Bridge the Rhine, affailed the Germans on the other fide River, and gave them feveral confiderable Defer he invaded the Britons likewife, who were till unknown, and having over-run them in a short Ti forced them to give him Hoftages and Contribu Amongst all the Variety and Greatness of his Es prizes, he had never ill Fortune but thrice: upon the Coast of Britain, where his whole Fleet like to have miscarried by Storm; the secon France, where one of his Legions was entirely off; and the third on the Frontiers of Gen where two of his Lieutenants were circumvented an Ambuscade and defeated.

At this time the Common-wealth was in great sternation; and the Senate resolving to create one Conful, which should be Pompey; Cafar pres with the Tribunes, who were endeavouring to him his Colleague that they should propose to People, 'That in respect to his Absence upon pu Affairs, they would make him capable of chosen again when his Consulship was out, otherwise he should be constrained to leave Wars, he had so prosperously begun, unfini Having succeeded in his Defires, his Hopes wer larged with his Defign, there was no kind of Bed, it or Munificence which he omitted to all Po

s En ving aft t t on

beg

e Cit ft Pr y of ae h Pavil

liged nator y, u nself ble F take th the

als 1 mes, lief ; y bad

Nor v nces a ts of old fe hout likew ies in r mo ng a , M

d, be

ch wa

ie fea

I

out

eet

on

ely

erm

nte

at (

ate

rev

0

2 10

pul of l

out, ave

Pa

began to build the Town Hall with the Spoils of s Enemies, paying a vast Sum for the Ground; and ving published a solemn Sword play, and made a aft to the People in Memory of his Daughter, he t only employed all the Cooks and Victuallers of e City to provide what they could get, but made A Preparations likewife at home; he doubled the y of his Soldiers for ever; he endeavoured to conue his Friendship with Pompey, by promising him Pavia, his Sifter's Grandaughter, in Marriage; he liged all Persons, about Pompey, and most of the nators, either by giving or lending them Moy, upon very reasonable Terms; he ingratiated nfelf with the rest by frequent Invitations; or ble Presents, not forgetting to let their Servants take of his Bounty, according to their Interest h their Masters. All criminal Debtors, and Proals had their Sanctuary in him, provided their mes, Debts, and Necessities were not beyond his lief; in which Case, he used plainly to tell them, y bad nothing to pray for but for a Civil War.

Nor was he less tedious in infinuating into foreign nces and Provinces: To fome he would make Pres of a thousand Prisoners at once; to others he uld fend as many and great Supplies as he pleafed, hout Consent or Authority of Senate or People; ikewife beautified and adorned the most eminent ies in Italy, France, Spain, Afia and Greece, with r most considerable Buildings; till at length all g amazed to fee whither thefe Things should , Marcellus the Confol proposed to the Senate to finite a Successor to Casar before his Time was ex-wered, because the War being sinished, and Peace reed, it would be convenient to disband the Army; ch was accordingly done, though opposed by the

D 3

Tribunes, and Cafar was likewife deprived of the Provinces over which he was Governor; Cafar bei nettled at the fierce Opposition against him, humb addrest to the Senate, That either that Favour Privilege of the People might be made good unto hi or that all other Generals might lay down their Co mands; intending thereby that Pompey, the Senan General, should dismiss his Forces, and hoping to he could afterward fooner raise a new Army the Pompey. But the Senate not thinking it fit to a tulate with a Subject, Cafar went into the low Part of France, resolving to oppose with his Swo whatever Decree the Senate should make against Intercessions of the Tribunes of the People who w of his Party, and this was his Pretence for the blo Civil Wars that followed, though Pompey used to That not being able to finish these publick Buildi which he had begun with fo much Magnificence, to fatisfy the Expectations of the People with his vate Estate, he resolved to put all Things into 0 fusion. Others fay, he was jealous of being question for what he had done illegally in his first Confully contrary to the Laws and Remonstrances of the bunes , and the rather, because Caro had folen fworn to impeach him as foon as ever he parted f his Army p and it was generally faid, That if returned as a private Person, they would handle as they did Mile, and make him answer before Judges with strong Guards about him, which is the more probable, by what he faid at the Battle Pharfalia, when he faw his Adversaries run; is their own doing. I myself must have been demned after so many noble Exploits, had I begged the Affiltance of my Army. Some that having been fo long wied to command, hing laid ch b Vhei Tri inflict to is T

erprize e ne: ay re le herion by I

him
ch b ch'd ing in ch he fuch whice ed, l

d the aving the I

s Sold Fideli elf of afferte of leve ningly computing his own and Enemies Power. laid hold of that Occasion to usurp that Power ch he had long before defigned.

Car

OW

wo 1.

Wiloo

0 di

2,1

SI

tion

ılli

em

f

le

ore

ttle

n o

ne 1

When he had Intelligence that the Intercession of Tribunes was ineffectual, and that they were out of Rome he made bold with a Baker's Mules, instantly clapt them into his Chariot, and after fet travelled with great privacy through By-lanes is Troops on the Banks of Rubicon; whither become, he flood still a while ruminating upon the rprize he was undertaking; at last turning to e next him, he faid, 'Thus far we are safe, and ay return, if we please; if we pass but this Bridge, e shall have nothing to trust to but our Arms.' le he flood doubting, there appeared to him rson of a remarkable Stature and Beauty fitting by him, and playing upon a Reed; not only Shepherds, but several of the Soldiers ran to him, and fome Trumpeters among the rest, h being observed by this Piper, he suddenly h'd a Trumpet out of one of their Hands, and ing instantly into the Watter, he sounded a Charge th he continued to the other fide of the River, such loudness as made the Earth tremble again; which Cafar cried out, 'Come then it is deeed, let us go whither the Prodigies of the Gods, d the Iniquity of our Enemies lead us.'

aving passed his Army over the River, and joined the Tribunes of the People, who being expelled of the City retired to him; he made an Oration s Soldiers, and with Tears in his Eyes implored Fidelity and Assistance, affirming he would strip elf of all rather than any should go unsatisfied afferted his Honour: after this he possess'd himof feveral Towns, and marching towards Bran-

(

eve ng e

0 0

ges

ch I s Im

unt Gre

his

Ti

for

rom ce to

lates

d Sc

is C

on,

frick

Fleet

us;

but

ed, &

tione

esper

Wars

ne had moi

his

us, th

dusium, whither Pompey and the Confuls were fled more speedy Transportation, he endeavoured to vent them, but in vain: and fo returned to with his Army, where calling the Senate toget and advising about the most weighty Matters of & he then marched into Spain, against the most confi able of Pompey's Forces, commanded then by Lieutenants, faying at his going thither, That be now going against an Army without a General, b bis Return, bis next Expedition would be again General, (meaning Pompey) without an Army. was opposed at Marseilles, but at length he red it, and fettled Spain in a short time, Coming to Rome and ordering all Things there according his own Mind, he marched against Pompey him and befieged him in his own Camp four Months incredible Labour, and at last utterly defeated hi The Dattle of Pharfalia; he purfued him to Ale dria in Egypt, where he finds him flain by King lomy, who was conspiring the same Entertainment him, whereupon he was there engaged in a desperate War, having neither Time nor Plan defend himself; yet though it was Winter an Supplies on that account uncertain; tho' he was up within the fame Walls with a numerous and Enemy, and unprovided of all Kind of Neces he overcame them at last, made himself Master Egypt, and gave the Command of it to Cleopatri her youngest Brother, not daring to make it a Prot left falling into the Hands of a pragmanical Gow it might cause new Difturbances. When Pa he Ga Head was presented him, he wept bitterly, and him to be honourably buried, faying, I lament Pomp pey's Fall and four my own Fortune: And fi rent : many Letters in his Coffers, whereby many

r Good-will to Pompey, and Hatred toward him ever read them, but instantly burnt them all, lest ag exasperated by them he should have been tempto commit some great Mischief; when Pompey's ges were thrown down, he set them up again; ch made Cicero say, That Cæsar in setting up Poms Images again, made bis own stand the surer. He unted his Conquest of the two Sons of Pompey Great, in Andalusia in Spain, the most glorious of his Victories, for he would often say, That at Imes he fought for Fame and Glory; but that for his Life, swhich he had never fought for be-

nfi

be

ba

7.

red ng l

dia

him

ths

hi Ale

ing

men

a Plat

an Wa

ind

ecel

ter o batri

Prov

Sow Pa

ndo

nent

nd fi

rom Alexandria he went into Syria, and from ce to Pontus, where in four Hours he beat Milater quite out of the Field; after which he red Scipio, Juba, and Pompey's Sons in Spain. In is Civil Wars, he never received any Defeat in on, but only in his Lieutenants, Curio miscarrying frick, and Antonius taken Prisoner; Dolabella lost Fleet in Illyricum, and Domitius his Army in us; once at Dyrrachium, when Pompey repulsed but not profecuting his Advantage, Cafar deed, be know not bow to make the best use of a ry. His next Exigence was in Spain abovetioned, where, in his last Battle, his Affairs were esperate, that he thought once to kill himself. Wars being ended, he triumphed five times, afe had defeated Scipio four times in a Month, and more after the Victory over the Sons of Pomhis first and most magnificent Triumph was that he Gauls, the next of Alexandria, the third of us, the fourth of Africk, and the last of Spain: Pomp and Preparation of each of them being tent and various. On the Day of his Gallick Triumph

5 1

C all

es, ch e

eat,

ivin

hed red

Wife

brou

t the

to

ebau s Mu

Was , W

is ch

buld

g wit gypt,

Triumph, the Axle-tree of his Chariot breaking had like to have been cast upon the Ground, ascended to the Capitol with Lights, having h Flephants attending him on both Hands, with a tiers of Torches. In his Pontick Triumph, upon feveral Pageants this Motto was inscribed, Veni, I Vici ; I came, I faw, I overcame; alluding to Expedition of his Conquests. He bestowed great Gifts and Possessions upon his old Soldiers, exhibited feveral Prizes, Stage-plays, and other a nificent Shews, to please the People; and apply himself to the Settlement of the State, he refor the Calender, which was then become confused, reduced it to that Account, which from him is to Day called the Takian Account.

His Stature was tall, his Complexion white Limbs firong and compact, his Vifage full, his black and lively, his Temper found and healthy, in his latter Days he was subject to swooming Fit, to be frightened in his Dreams; twice he was furp with the Falling Sickness as he fat in Judgment. Baldness was a great Trouble to him, and often gone to posed him to the Scoffs of his Enemies, and then d to samong all the Honours conferred upon him beent he Senate and People, he received none with amitted Delight than the privilege of wearing a Laurel is faid land perpetually: In his Cloaths he was fing trate in remarkable, wearing his long Senator's Robe for faying with Gold, fringed at the Hands, and girt about went always loofly; which gave Occasion to that Expression of Sylla; who oft admonished the Nobility, I intertain ware of that Boy that went girded fo flightly; od, the was exceedingly addicted to Nectors and form was exceedingly addicted to Neatness and fump y, lest Hospitality at his Table. It is reported he by or I took the Voyage into Great Britain in expectat

s, whose Value he could judge by poising them s Hands; he was a great Lover, and a most cu-Collector of Jewels, Seals, Pictures, Statues, all kind of Antiquities; he spared no Cost for es, if young and handsome. He kept his House ch exact Dicipline, even in little Things as well eat, that he clapt one of his Servants into Irons iving some Guests worse Bread than himself, and hed another of his Gentlemen whom he much ared, with Death for committing Adultery with Vife of a Roman Knight, though no Complaint brought against him.

t the general Report was that himself was much to Women (if not worse) and with his Liberaebauched many Ladies of Quality, and among

s Mutia the Wife of Pompey.

n

0 phy

d,

to

ite.

is I

its,

t. fter

hen

1 b

h

rel

ngu

Atu

Ctat

was likewise enamoured of several Queens, as , Wife of the King of Mauritania, and others; is chiefest Passion was for Cleapatra, with whom ould oft entertain himself till next Morning, ırpı g with her in the fame Barge or Pleafure-boat gypt, almost as far as Etbiopia, and had doubt-gone through had not his Army mutinied, and d to follow him. He after invited her to Rome, ent her back with many Honours and Rewards; mitted her to call a Son of hers by his Name, 's faid did exactly refemble him. That he was rate in drinking, his very Enemies confess; faying was, That he was the only faber Man nout went to Subvert the Government of the State, Apr Diet he was so indifferent, that being at a publisher tainment, where ill Oil was fent up instead thy od, the rest refusing to touch it, he eat very ump y, lest otherwise he should uphraid the Host of it y or Neglect. He abstained from no way of getting

btf

the

bk

apo oft

5;

ofe

4 6

Ho

17 e fi

At lo

gth

rds

z to

e Er

eld,

the

Bridg

d hir

felves

red P

Hand

aled

thou

ered

th, b ce, w oft ime

thei

their

Pproa

he c

10 2

getting Money in his Civil and Military Comma and maintained his Civil Wars, Triumphs, and She by all manner of Rapine and Sacrilege. In I quence and Martial Conduct he excelled the be his Predecessors, none being more pungent nor quent in his Sentences, nor more neat and elegan his Words. He writ the Commentaries of his a Actions in the Wars of France, and against Pomin so judicious, eloquent and modest a Stile, as jumakes it a Question, whether he writ or soughts the greater Spirit.

At his Weapon, and riding the great Horse, was excellently expert; and in Labour most in fatigable, marching constantly at the Head of Army, both on Horse back and a Foot, always his Head bare in all Weathers. His Diligence fo incredible, that upon an Expedition he would fifty Leagues in a Hackney Chariot, swimming Rivers, if any were in his Way, or else passing with blown Bladders, fo as he out-ran all intellig of him. In his martial Undertakings, it is do whether he used more Caution or Courage; he marched his Armies in any dangerous Ways, ti had first thoroughly discovered them: Before his ing in England, he himself surveyed the Ports Accesses to go into that Island. Having notice his Camp was belieged in Germany, he passe Enemies guards disguised like a Frenchman, and fafe to their Relief. No religious Scruple ever hi his Defigns; when he went against Juba, the ran away just as it was to be facrificed, which thought an ill Omen, yet he valued it not: was getting out of the Ship, he fell to the G but preventing the bad Prefage, he cried out, Possession of thee, O Africk. When he faw any btful, he dismounted his Troopers, and sent away their Horses, and his own first, that it being imposed to escape, they might either fight or die. He upon a most remarkable Horse, whose Feet were oft like a Man's, the Hooss being cloven to the s; he bred him up from a Colt with great Care, whe the Astrologers declared, That Horse's Master id have the Empire of the World. Neither would Horse suffer any Body upon him but Casar, who i'd him himself.

e several times restored the Battle when it was all lost, by opposing himself against them that sled, gethem by the Throats, and forcing their Faces and the Enemy. After the Battle of Pharsalia, geto Sea in a Bark by himself, he met with Ten e Enemies Ships, and stoutly commanded them.

eld, which they instantly performed.

c. 11

of

5 1

ce

uld

ng

ng llig

dou

e I

his

orts

otic

affor

and

er hi

: 3

e G

out,

any

the Siege of Alexandria, as he was attempting Bridge, the Enemy made a desperate Sally, and d him into a Boat, into which others throwing selves, he leap'd into the Sea, and swam two red l'aces to the next Ship, though he held his Hand above Water to preserve some Papers, aled his General's Robe after him with his Teeth. should fall into his Adversaries Hands: He ered his Soldiers neither by their Qualities nor th, but their Courage and Strength, using them ke, with the fame Severity and Indulgence, and oft give them falle Alarms. If they were at ime discouraged with the Report of the Num-f their Enemies, he would not lessen but intheir Number above what was true. As upon pproach of Juba whose Power was terrible to he called them together, and faid; 'Know in a few Days Juba will be here with ten Le-

T

01

me

16

He

IN

of

ore fev bis

m

ently

con

tato

Tit

tatue

ate,

red -

e his

nes:

ced by

As :

he too

defpe

when ourable Temp

ng by

he Cor

he Tri

done 5

the G

di avie

had put

gions, thirty Thousand Men at Arms, a hund thousand Horse, and three hundred Elephan Therefore, let every one forbear to enquire or o cern himself further, for I am sufficiently inform and if any presume to discourage you, I will him into the oldest Ship I can get, and expose to the Mercy of the Winds and Floods."

He neither took Notice of all Faults, nor pun them alike: those that were seditious or deferted Colours, he punish'd severely. After a Victory would abate his Brick Discipline, suffering all Riot and Luxury, boalling often, That his Sa could fight in their very Perfumes. He used to them his Companions and Fellow-Soldiers, and them always brave in Arms shining with Gold Silver, that they might fight the more stoutly. to fave their Armour; he loved them so well, hearing of the Defeat of his Party under Tin he let his Beard and Hair grow for Indignation, was thoroughly revenged; by which obliging Car his Soldiers had such an entire Affection for him when he first undertook the Civil Wars, then not a Captain in his Legions but offered to find a Horle out of their own Pay, neither did an Take him : and though taken by the Enemis offered their Lives to take up Arms against chose rather to die: They endured Hunge other Extremities of War, with extraordinary stancy; and when repulsed at Dyrachium, they and offered themselves to be punished; so that had more trouble to comfort, than correct During his ten Years War with Gaul they new tined, in his Civil Wars but Jeldom, and then n presently to their Duty; after he had made Emperor, he advanced Persons of the meaned on to the highest Honours; for which being med, he said, If they were Thieves and Murderers, bad fluck to me in defence of my Honour, I would

e

d

y

Sal

to

nd

old

11,

Tin

in, lan

find an nics inft

ger

ary

hey

hat

ea

nev

n n

de

met

ve dane the same. He was not naturally revengeful; and for Clemency Moderation, was admirable. To fuch as spoke of him, he thought it fufficient to admonish them ore the People to defift for the future; and beseverely asperfed by Libels, whose Authors were his Power, he took all patiently without Revenge. many of his Speeches and irregular Actions fufently discovered that he much abused his Authority. committed many capital Crimes; for besides the avagant Honours he assumed, as the perpetual hatorship, the continual Consulship, the Censorship, Title of Emperor and Father of his Country, atue among the Kings, a Chair of Gold in the ate, and another in the Courts of Justice, he red greater Dignities than became a Man, as to e his Image carried like a God in the Cercenfian nes; he had his Temples, Altars, and Images ed by the Gods, his confecrated Beds and his ils; in short, there were no Honours whatever, he took or gave as he pleased. But the most cruel desperate Hatred arose against him from hence, when the Senate came to him in a Body with most ourable Decrees, he received them fitting before Temple of Venus; and in one of his Triumphs ng by the Seats of the Tribones, and observing e Company role up and faluted him but P. Aguihe Tribune, he in great Indignation cried out: done Tribune Aquila, you bad best try if you can the Government of the Common-wealth out of my is with your Tribuneship. When at a Festival had put on a Crown of Laurel on his Statue, and the Tribunes ordered it to be taken off, her fo offended, taking it for an ill Omen of his conation, that he sharply rebuked them, and turned to out of their Commands. He suffered some Pent to salute him with the Title of King; and it affirmed, that he resolved suddenly to declare Opinion that Cæsar should be called King, became found in the Books of the Sybils, that the stations were not to be conquered but by a King.

This was the great Occasion of hastning the spiracy against him, and their Councils were united, the People growing fenfible of their Co tion, and wishing for some body to affert their berties: Some writ under the Statue of the for Brutus, Would to God thou were alive again: of under Cafar's Image, Brutus was created the Conful for expelling Kings, and this Man the la Kings for Suppressing Confuls. The Conspiracy managed by above threefcore Persons, the chief C. Caffius, Marcus, and Decimus Brutus; they deliberated whether to throw him over the Bridge to kill him at his entrance into the Theatre; but the Senate had orders to meet in Pompey's Court the Ides of March, they preferred that Time Place before all the reft.

Casar had warning of his Death by many sages: In digging up some Sepulchres at Capus sound in the Monument of Capus, Founder of City, a Brass Table with this Inscription in When the Bones of Capus shall be discovered it come to pass that a Person descended from Julius to murdered by his Kindred, and his Death revenged a after with the Ruin of all Italy: Not many before this Disaster, his Horses which he had cerated at his Passage over the Rubicen, being turns

Hea Hea s of alioh Laur

he F

tly.

s ou at Ni Cloud.

Top band Door eftly Day

ver i

ntly

rer to ild'st e hin th make n to le ttal D not mive for ne'er

ome, 1

y show

he Fields, refused to eat, and seemed to weep abuntly. As he was at Sacrifice, Spurinna the Southr bid him beware of the Danger hanging over Head, which would fcarce be deferr'd beyond the of March. The Day before a little Bird, called aliolus, flying into Pompey's Court, with a Branch Laurel in her Mouth, was purfued by feveral s out of the next Grove, and torn in pieces there. t Night he himself dreamt he was flying above Clouds, and sometimes shaking Jupiter by the d. Calphunia his Wife dreamt, likewise that Top of the House was fallen down, and that her band was stabbed in her Arms, and immediately Doors flew open of themselves; upon which she effly persuaded him not to go into the Senate Day; but all the Charms of her loving Eloce and Tenderness could not prevail. Hear his ver in the Words of the elegant Lucan, as exntly rendred into English.

Ah Dear Calphurnia,

y l

rti

me

ny

340

of 1 6

ta

ny

UTT

rer to me than that Life and breath I draw, ild'st thou forbear thy Grief, it could not lye in the Power of any Prodigy make this Day a sad one; should I here in to learn that superstitious Fear stal Days and Hours, what Day to me de'er hereaster from such Fears be free? I whould my wretched Mind torment, not my destin'd Time of Death prevent: we for ever with vain Fears diseas'd, ne'er Astrologers and Augurs pleas'd.

Is ar's Danger grow from Discontent one, not one Days absence can prevent,

Nor

E 3

Nor scarce reprieve my Fate, and once to die, Better than ever fear Conspiracy. What good can throngest Guards on me confer, But make me live perpetual Prisoner? Why thould I fear the People's Discontent? Who now enjoy under my Government More Wealth, more Safety, and Prosperity, Than by my Death they could? The Death of me That have already reached the Height of all Glory and State that can to Man befal; And wrought my furthest Ends, can never be So much my own as their Calamity. Oh do not fear thy Dream, Calphurnia. Nor fad Prefages from fuch Trifles draw; But if they are Prefages tell me then, (For our two Dreams to Night have different been Which fliould prevail? Methought I flew above The lofty Clouds and touch'd the Hand of Jour, And to myfelf did feem more great and high Than e'er before what but Felicity Should this portend? I dare not now suspect In Peace, Heaven's care, who help'd me to effect My roughest Wars; Oh let no sad Surmise; With causeless Grief bedew Calphurnia's Eyes.

Yet though he seemed to slight the Prodigies, had such influence upon him, that he had once Thoughts of staying at Home that Day, bu Brutus coming and persuading him not to disapthe Senate now it was full, and had long attain, he went about eleven o'Clock; by the Wiwas presented by a Person he met, with a discovering the whole Conspiracy, but he pamong his Papers in his left Hand, as if he read it anon. Having then sacrificed to the God

fue

ho

Co

to

im

to 1

do

ng i fta of

n Bi

Age

rds

his

W

tchin

effes.

eless

dure preffin

forme

ofe g

e filer

Yet h

Pou

Cafa

no Su

by fu

ceeding in none, in Defiance of all thefe ill Omens. entered the Senate, laughing at Spurima for a Prophet, feeing the Ides of March were come hout any Difaster; to which he replied, They are e indeed, but not paft. As foon as he was fat. Conspirators placed themselves about him, pretendto do him Honour; and immediately Cimber lius, who had engaged to begin, address'd himself im as if to demand fomething; but Cafar feems to put him off to another Time, Cimber catch'd of his Gown by both Shoulders; and Cafar ng out, This was Violence, one of the Caffii came flabbed him under the Throat; Cafar laying of his Arm, ftruck it thro' with his Dagger, and avouring to rife, was flop'd by another Wound; n Brutus affaulted him, he cried out, And are thou ngst them too, my Son Brutus? But feeing feveral rds prefented to his Breaft, he covered his Head his Gown, and in this manner received twenty Wounds, and died without speaking a Word tching so much as a Sigh, which the Poet thus effes.

eless he hides his Face and fixed stands, dure the Fury of revenging Hands; pressing Groans or Words, as loath to shame former Life, or dying stain the Fame ofe great Deeds throughout the World express, e silent Thoughts revolving in his Breast: Yet has not Fortune chang'd, nor given the 'Pow'r,

Cæsar's Head to any Conqueror, no Superior's proud Command I die, by subjected Rome's Conspiracy;

en)

e je.

nce

bu

ilap

atte

W

e 1

he

God Suc E 4

· Who

Who to the World confesses by her Fears,

My Power and Strength to be too great for Hen, And from Earth's highest Throne sends me to be

By After-Ages made a Deity.

Being dead, all the Conspirators fled, and he w carried home in a Litter. They once resolved have drawn his Body into Tyber, to have conficu his Estate, and make void all his Acts, but were afra of M. Antonius, the Conful. He was afterwards ried with great Magnificence and Pomp; and infe of a Funeral Oration, M. Antonius, the Conful, p lished an Act of the Senate, by which they dear him all Honour, both Human and Divine, and I wife caused an Oath to be read, whereby they obli themselves in the Desence of a single Person. Funeral being over, the People ran in Multin with Firebrands in their Hands to fet the House Brutus and Caffius on fire.

He died in the fifty fixth Year of his Age, was canonized among the Gods, not only by who made the Decree, but by the persuasions of People. Of his Murderers, scarce any out-lived three Years, or died a natural Death. All stood demined, and fell by divers Accidents; some drow at Sea, others killed in Fight, and some slew to selves with the same Dagger wherewith they murdered Cafar, He lived in the Year, of World 3901, and before the Birth of Christ

Leven Years.

DHU They f wbose Sun as made rehy (birty K settled.

noth b

SH

aves to they 1 ben Go

SHUA, Captain General of ISRAEL.

SHUA's much worthier than the Three before, They false Gods, he the true God did adore; whose great Pow'r and over-ruling Hand, Sun and Moon he caused still to stand, made a longer Day than e'er was known, rety God's Enemies might he o'erthrown, birty Kings subdu'd in Canaan, settled Israel in their conquer'd Land; moth being full of Years and Victories, aves to Israel this his last Advice, they should fear the Lord, and him obey, ben God from the Earth takes him away.

od

w t

ney

nift

5 H

cce

a n

ith

t th

od.

hicl

all l

Vhil

told

ed

titue

ing

th;

r ter

fam

ons

ard

die,

conin

er wi

is Su

ites,

his F

him

int A

ould

nan.

cer, v

a CI

a cert

Whol

ty Ye

ming

he h

ble : 1

HO can see the Sun and not remember John and the great Commerce that this valor Captain had with the King of Stars? All the Wolisted up their Eyes to it, but none but he hath if up his Voice so far as it, to make himself be he and obeyed. The Stars knew Johna (or Johna the because he bere the Name of him that formed the it is he that gave us the Foretastes of the Name Jejus, at which the Heaven, the Earth, and Hell bend the Knee.

Moses, knowing that by God's Appointment he to die, and not enter into the Land of Canaan, they came upon the Borders, he called the Ifra together, and spake to them to this Purpose; ing, (fays he) I go to my Ancestors, and God prefixed this Day for my Departure, it is very that while I am alive and fland in your Prefer I should give him Thanks for the Care and Pr dence he hath hitherto had of your Affairs; only in delivering you from fo many Evils, but in largly imparting his B'effings to you, and bed he hath also assisted me with his Favour, whilst my atmost I endeavour'd to make you as happy as fible; for it is he only who hath begun and acc plish'd all those great Things that have been don you, and who hath made me his Minister and Sen in all the Good which you have received; to which Bleffings, I have thought it requifite in parting from you, to praise the Goodness of God, who in Time to come shall have the and Charge over you; and to acquit my fe that Debt, I leave you this remembrance, you ought to ferve and honour the Lord, and verence the Ordinance which he hath given whereby he may continue his Favour toward and may give you Grace to preserve and kee cellent Commands; furely a Law-giver, that were more than a Man, would be much displeased ith those who should violate his Ordinances, and t them at nought; do not you therefore tempt od, who is provoked to Anger, when those Laws hich he himself hash established and given you, all be contemned and neglected.'

on No like of the like of the

her

rat

. 9

dl

ery

ele

rs;

ut

bed

ila

y as

200 don

Ser

; fo

e in

of

the y fel

e,

and

kee

Whilst Moses pronounced these his last Words and told to the Tribes their several Destinies, and ed them all manner of Bleffings, the whole titude brake out into Tears, and the Women ing their Breafts, shewed their Sorrow for his th; the Children likewise lamented, because in r tender Years they had understood the Virtue famous Acts of Moses; who beholding their Afons could not restrain himself from Tears; afard he walked towards the Place where he was tie, and they all followed him weeping. when oning them to fland ftill, and not afflict him any er with their Griefs, having appointed Joshua to is Successor to head the Armies against the Caites, according to the command of God, and his Hands on him, he went accompanied only him and Eleazer the High Prieft, up to the ant Abarim, which is very high, and from whence ould discover the greatest Part of the Land of an, where taking his leave of Josbua and zer, with many endearing Embraces, on a fuda Cloud encompassed him, and he was carried a certain Valley, where he died and was buried whole Time of his Life was an hundred and ty Years, the third Part whereof he spent in ming this great People, In Counsel and Judg the had no equal; in Eloquence he was incom ven ble; his Skill in War made him senowned among

down

escap

terne

beca

brom

Tophu

ind t

with

he W est,

he P lan,

ccor

niddl

ild

vonde

he P

fter f

he J/ed o

ept t

od c

east,

ery

ight

Da

mbled mpas

rump

e Pow

the

F

the greatest Captains, and no Man had the Gist Prophecy in so great a Degree; for his Wo seemed as so many Oracles, and as if inspired God himself. The People mourned for him this Days with real Grief and Trouble: In short he lebeling him a great Estimation among all who we acquainted with his Virtues and Graces.

After Moles was taken from among Men and Time of mourning past, Joshua a Man in whom the Spirit of Wisdom, commanded the People to pare and march forward to Battle; fending Spies Tericho to found their Minds, and discover their F ces, and then raifing his Camp, he proceeded town the River Jordan: and the Princes of the Th of Ruben and Gad, and of the half Tribes of h naffes (to whom the Country of the Amorites wh was the seventh part of Canaan, was given for Habitation) having furnished him with fifty thous Men, he proceeded toward the Enemy; at wh time the Spies returning, and having fure Jericho, gave an Account thereof, and likewise h narrowly they escaped, having been hid by Ra the Harlot under some Packs of Linen, who be thus delivered from Danger by her means, the fired them to fwear, 'That when they should t ' Jericho, and kill all the Inhabitants with the Sw as the knew that God had commanded, they wo fave her Life and the Lives of her Family, as had faved theirs; which they accordingly ag to, advising her, that when she should perceive City ready to be taken, she should bring all that would have spared into her House, and then has red Cloth over her Door, that the General of ing or destroying her or hers; after this, she let the down with a Rope from the Wall, whereby they escaped back again.

hi

we d

g c ies F

W:

[n] oufa

wh rve fe b

Ral

o be

he ld t

Swe

W0

agr

ive

hat

'h21

l ob

et t

Joshua having this Account, seemed somewhat conterned how they should pass over the River Jordan, because it was deep, and without Bridges. But God promised him they should have a safe Passage over; Joshua therefore waited with his Army two Days, and then passed over the River, the Priests going first with the Ark, who as foon as they had fet their Feet in he Water, which was then very high, it being in Har-est, the Waters from above rose up in an Heap, and he Priests stood on dry Ground in the midst of Joran, till all the People passed quite over; and then, coording to God's Command, they took out of the which ild an Altar for a Memorial to After Ages, of this for vonderful Deliverance; and all Things being finish'd he Priests came out of the Biver, which instantly fter flowed with as much Violence as before. Whilft he Israelites did all this, the Canaanites never faled out upon them, but difmay'd with Fear, they ept themselves within the Walls of Jericho, which ofbua resolved to besiege with all his Forces; but od commanded him, that on the first Day of the east, the Priests leaving the Ark, and guarded on very fide with Troops of armed Men, should draw ear Jericho, founding seven Rams Horns, and at ight to return to their Camp; this they performed Days together; but on the feventh, Joshua afmbled the People early, and caused them to enmpass the City seven times that Day, and the rumpets founding with great Force, the Walls, by e Power of God, without any Violence used by the brews fell down flat to the Ground, so that enterthe City over the Ruins, they put all within it to the Sword, the Enemy, through the sudden At mishment that fell upon them, being unable to rest and so great was the Slaughter, that they need spared Women nor Children, but filled the swith dead Carcasses; which at length being set Fire, served for a Funeral Flame to consume the only Rabab and her Houshold were saved by Spies, and Joshua bestowed an Inheritance upon and ever after held her in great Honour.

Then Joshua denounced Curses on those who sho endeavour to build this City, foretelling, that should lay the Foundation thereof in the Days of eldest Son, and should lose his youngest e'er it finished. There was much Spoil taken both in G Silver, and Brass in this City; and Josbua har before commanded that all the Gold and Silver for be brought to one Place, to offer to God as the Fruits for his Assistance, none of them, but only Man, kept any Thing to himfe f, all being deline to the Priests to be laid up in the Treasury; Achan the Son of Zebadias of the Tribe of Ju having got the King's Coat embroidered with G and a wedge of Gold of two hundred Shekle Weight, and thinking it unjust that what he had with the Hazard of his Life, should be taken him, he digged a Pit in his Tent, and buried Spoils therein, defigning to defraud God as we his Companions.

At this Time the Israelites Tents were pitche Gilgal, which fignifies Liberty, because being delin from Egyptian Bondage, and the Wants of the derness, they now thought they had nothing motear. A few Days after the Destruction of Ju Joshua sent out three thousand armed Men again a City hard by, who encountering with their A ly foure are a my f

ies,

rty

omife ich e mfel ars a en 7

Lor y our onqu

hom is Co ways remife ompli hen aving, row, eamly ar it, ame i by proit be t ighty, w into

ies, the Israelites were put to flight, and loft rty fix Men; the News of this Difaster being bught to the Camp, they were much astonished, not y for the Men they had loft, but despairing of ure Success, fince they persuaded themselves they re already Mafters of the Field, and that their my should be always victorious, according to the mile of God, and that this Advantage would the encourage, their Enemies; so that cloathing mselves in Sackcloth, they spent three Days in ars and Lamentations, without taking any Meat; en Joshua saw them thus dejected, falling on his te to the Earth; he thus addressed himself to God: Dord, thou knowest, we have not been induced y our own Rashness and Temerity to attempt the onquest of this Land by Force, but have been bereunto encouraged by thy Servant Moses, to hom thou didst promise by divers Signs to give us is Country to inhabit, and that our Armies should ways have the Victory in Battle, and of these thy semifes we have often experienced the certain Acemplishment; But now, O Lord, what shall I say, hen Ifrael turn their Backs to their Enemies; for aving, beyond all Expectation, received an Overrow, and lost some of our Soldiers, we are extes, and all the Inhabitants of the Land should ar it, and should encompass us, and cut off our ame from the Earth, for we have li tle . Hope of y prosperous Proceedings in Time to come; nt be thou Affiftant to us, O Lord, who art Alighty, and in thy Mercy change our present Sorw into Joy, our Discouragement into Confidence, d give us. Victory in ho

TO

70 la

ad

ied wel

he liv

e

mo

To in A

Joshua having made this Prayer, God present commanded him to arise and purge the People in that Sacrilege and Theft which had been commit among them, by concealing those Things which w confecrated to himfelf, affuring him, that this was Cause, of their present Calamity; which as soon a was discovered, Ifrael, should be again victorious ong their Adversaries. Joshua hereupon calling for Joshua High priest, and the Magistrates, he cast Lots to from the Tribes, and the Lot fell upon the Tribe of Jul dors he then cast them again upon the Families, and it upon the Family of Zarbites; lastly, the Lots was wo cast Man by Man. and it fell upon Achan, who m wit able to deny what was discovered by God him nee we confessed the Fact, and produced what he had to of cealed, whereupon he was presently stoned to De far C and the Anger of the Lord was appealed. hoes the Then Joshua having purified the People, led the were forth against the City of Ai, and laying an Am but b of Men secretly over Night above the City, early dition the Morning he drew the Enemy out to fight. God being encouraged by their former Success, by to inl affaulted them. but Joshua seeming to retreat and Confeddrew them farther off the City, imagining that the d the raclites fled, and that they should gain a second Vit Eleaze over them, and thereupon all the Men of Ai, and as fwar next City, Betbel, were called out to pursue the teir Fri that there was not a Man lest in either City, I ffered Joshua suddenly making a stand, and giving a Signing on those in Ambush, they instantly marched into the Girl. City, and set it on fire, which, when the Management of the Canada and the control of the Canada and Ai looking back, perceived, they inftantly fled, ged ther feattered themselves through the Fields; but id, that pursued so furiously that few escaped, the Kit y, the di was taken alive and hanged on a Tree by J

ua, Soldie he G e wh

twel

fla idera

that i

twelve thousand, even all the Inhabitants of Ai slain that Day. The Spoil they got was very iderable, both in Silver and Cattle; all which wa, when he came to Gilgal distributed among soldiers.

he Gibeonites, who dwelt near Jerujalem, having e what had happened to Jericho and Ai, and ng the same Missortune, since, they understood Josbua intended utterly to root out the Canaafrom off the Earth, they resolved to send Amdors to conclude a Peace with him; and knowthat if they owned themselves to be Canaanites, a would make no League with them, they came m with Protestations, that they had no Converse nor nce with that Nation, but being incited by the far Country, which he might perceive by the far Country, which he might perceive by those and Garments, and by their mouldy Bread hoes and Garments have been the beautiful to the bread hoes and Garments have been the beautiful to the bread hoes and Garments have been the beautiful to the bread hoes and Garments have been the bread hoes and Garments have been the bread hoes and the bread hoes and the bread hoes are bread hoes and the bread hoes and the bread hoes are bread hoes ar but by the length of the Way were now in the ath dition they faw them; and that they were affored God hath given the Israelites the Land of Ca-to inherit, with whom they therefore defired to t, Confederates by this subtile Practice, they perand ed the Hebrews to enter into amity with them, the Via Eleazer the High-priest, and the Council of the the seir Friends and Allies, and no Hostilities should fered them. In three Days after, Joshua en. Sign on the Borders of their Country, understood the Gibeonites, dwelt not far from Jerusalem, and M. Canaanites, and sending for the Chief of them. ged them with this deceitful Dealing; who alled, but ed, that having no other way to procure their Kirty, they were obliged to make use of this; y J whereupon

The

yg

ref

ir K

d F

ario

wall

fea

Ha

rch'd

fif:1

ftro

bei

. V

pe ;

lain.

ched

ing a

fell i

Cana

e ftro

hen

he T

ichem.

nmanors, he

esente

Time

observ y Ki

by t fited in

at the whereupon he called to him the High priest and E ders, and they concluded not to infringe the Oath God; however, for the Treason they were a demned to be Hewers of Wood, and Drawen

Water to the Camp.

When the King of Jerusalem heard that the Gi onites, had submitted to Josbua, he affembled Kings, his Neighbours, and refolved to fall up them, who perceiving their Danger, defired 76 to affift them, who marching with all speed to the Relief, he, with his whole Army, fell upon the early in the Morning, and quickly put them to Flig and pursuing them to a steep Tract called Bethe the Lord destroyed a great Number of them Thunder, Lightning, and Hailstones from Heart and the Night approaching, Josbua, with mig Faith, cried out, 'Sun stand thou still upon Gi and thou Moon in the Valley of Ajalon; and Sun flood ftill, and the Moon was flayed till People had avenged themselves on their Enen and the Sun did not go down about a whole Day, there was no Day like that before or after it, the Lord hearkened to the Voice of a Man, for . Lord fought for Ifrael. And the five King themselves in a Cave near Makkedab, but were covered and brought to Josbua, who commanded Captains to tread upon their Necks, as an en Token to them of Success against all the rest: which he flew them, and hanged them on five T and their Forces were utterly cut off and destroy after this wonderful Success, Joshua led his Ara the Mountains of Canaan, where, having ma great Slaughter, and taken rich Booty, he bro back the People to Gilgal.

The Renown of the Israelites Victories, and that y gave no Quarter, coming among the neighbour-Nations, they were posses'd with extream Fear, resolved to try their utmost Strength: whereupon ir Kings raised an Army of three hundred thoud Foot, ten thousand Horse, and twenty thousand ariots, so great an Host as was sufficient utterly wallow up the Ifraelites; but the Lord bid Josbua fear, fince they fould all furely he delivered into Hand; encouraged by these Promises, Joshua ch'd out courageously against his Enemies, and fifth Day he came upon them; the Encounter strong, and the Slaughter very great, Multitudes being killed in the Pursuit, and all the Kings , very few of this numerous Army making their pe; Johua having commanded their Horses to lain, and their Chariots to be burnt, he afterwards ched victoriously thro' the whole Country, beng and taking many strong Places, and killing all fell into his Hands, so that in five Years none of Canaanites were left alive, but only in two or e firong Fortrefles.

then Joshua removed his Camp to Shilo, and set the Tabernacle there, and from thence he marched sichem, and there built an Altar; according to the mand of Moles; and being now well stricken in its, he assembled all the People in Shilo, where he esented to them the happy Success wherewith, till Time, God had savoured them, because they observed his Laws; that no less than one and y Kings, who had presumed to oppose them, by them overcome, and all their Armies distincted in Battle, and most of their Cities destroyed, at there was no Memory of them remaining; he fore thought sit they should send to survey the

or go re de T

Extent of Canaan, and to measure it out among Tribes; which being approved of by the Congregation ten Men were appointed to view the Land, who turning with a full Account of it in fix Months Ti Joshua with the High Priest and Princes of the Tri divided the Country among them; and then he di buted the Prey they had taken from the Enemy, w was very great, fo that they were all enriched by it

After which he affembled the whole Army, to those that were planted on the other fide Jon who had born Arms with the rest, and were Number no less than fifty Thousand, he spal Since God, the Father and Master of our Nat hath given this Country into your Possession, hath promifed to preserve the same to you for and fince you have chearfully affifted us in all Necessities and Dangers, according to God's 0 mand and Direction, it is requifite now we have further Service for you, that we difmiss you H to enjoy what you purchased, and may the be in a Capacity to engage with us hereafter all Occasions. We therefore give you hearty The that you have vouchsafed to be our Companion all our Perils, and defire you would always tinue this mutual Affection between us, remen ing that by God's Favour, and our affifting other, we have attained to this our present Fel Neither have you adventured without some Re when for your Labours, for you are hereby enne and shall carry home much Cattle, with S Gold. Brass, Iron, and very much Raiment: likewise our fincere Love to you whenever have Occasion to use us; for we have not forgo flighted Mojes's Command before bis Death, no have you spared any Pains to oblige us to you. there it any ip, a vixt t equis, e fam hose I ligent come atytes laving Tribe then reft c built emori he oth an h ned t thip o felves

erefo

Uness

aws a ua and ined t on wa eupon ten (

Phinea s Pur You h hished

e up

erefore dismiss you to your own Possessions in liness of Contentment, beseeching you never to ip, and let not the River Jordan, which is beixt us, hinder you from confidering us as Hecws, for we are all the Posterity of Abraham, and e same God gave Life to both our Progenitors, hole Laws and Religion, inflituted by Moses, are ligently to be observed, for thereby will the Lord come our Helper; but if we degenerate from his

s de la

er

laving fpoke thus, Joshua embraced the Chief of Tribes, who returned, and their whole People them. After the Tribe of Ruben and Gad and reft of the Manaffites, had passed over Jordan, built an Altar upon the Bank of the River, as emorial to Posterity, of their Alliance with those he other fide; which, when the Ifraelites beyond an heard, they rashly imagined their Brethren ned to violate their Religion, and introduce the thip of false Gods, and therefore instantly armed selves to be revenged of them, as having forsaken aws and Ordinances of their Forefathers. ua and Eleazer, the High Priest, and the Elders. ined them, advising first to enquire what their Inon was and accordingly to proceed against them; eupon they fent Phineas the Son of Eleazer. ten of the Princes, as Ambassadors to them. when they arrived, an Assembly was summoned, Phineas standing up in the Midst of them, spake s Purpose:

You have committed too heinous an Offence to be nished with Words, and yet we would not suddenly e up Arms against you, though the Crime you have committed is very heinous, but rather to first to admonish you; to which Purpose we fent to you as Ambassadors, hoping that in fideration of the Friendship between us you be persuaded to acknowledge and detest your Fa we therefore require you to inform us of the why you have built an' Altar, that if it be with ill Delign, you may not think you are hardly with, if we take Revenge upon you for the fa but if it be otherwise, we may be satisfied what Account it is erected; for we can scarce lieve that you, who are fo well grounded in Knowledge of God, and the Laws which he felf hath given you, should fince your Depa from us, and arrival in your own Patrimony, you have obtained by his Favour, and pear enjoy by his Providence, so forget him, as to fake his Tabernacle, Ark, and Altar, and duce strange Gods, and thereby be Partake the Impieties of the Canaanites; yet if you n your Folly, and return to your ancient Rel a Pardon is granted to you; but if you obthin perfift in your Wickedness, we will venture defence of our Faith, and God's true Religion will treat you like the Inhabitants of Canad though you have past the River, you are no ter tw empt from God's Power, who is in all Place, to hi can at all Times avenge himself upon you so nom he Iniquities. Resolve therefore with yoursel bey show renounce your Error, and consider whethe and best not better for you to enjoy Peace and Safety and affect to expose yourselves, your Wives and Child and G the danger of a bloody War.

oly 1 eakir

of in

thers

at the Heb

befor

for th

h Je A Inte

petua

ligati

hout ligion d to

Opini

WOL

me, v guilty

eard t , Phi

of in

here v

of that

y, eac

to hi

olly to

Phineas ending his Oration, the Chief of the conly made this Reply; We never thought of taking the Union which joins us fo near together, of innovating any thing in the Religion of our thers; we will always persevere therein; we know at there is one God, the common Father of all Hebrews, and none but the brazen Altar which before the Tabernacle shall receive our Sacrifices; for that which we have now erected, and caused th Jealousy in you, we did not build it with the Intent to offer Sacrifice thereon, but only as a petual Monument of our Alliance, and of our ligation to continue firm in the same Belief, but hout the least Intent of making Alteration in our ligion; to the Truth whereof, we call Almighty d to Witness, therefore instead of continuing an Opinion of us, we defire that for the future, would never suspect us conscious of such a me, whereof none of Abraham's Posterity can guilty, without deferving to lofe his Life.' Haveard this modest Reply, and praised their Cony, Phineas returned and gave Johna an Account of in the Presence of the People, who rejoicing here was no cause of Bloodshed, offered Sacriof thanksgiving to God, and, dissolving the Aiy, each Man returned home.

ke

1

eli ftir

e 101

ac

ces

fo

rfel

ter twenty Years, Joshua being extream old, to him the Princes, Magistrates, and Elders, nom he uttered his dying Words, to this Effect: bey should call to Remembrance the many Benefits the and bestowed upon them, whereby from a very ety and afflisted Condition they had attained to great and Glory. He then earnestly exhorted them only to observe God's Commandments, that so f the continue his merciful Hand over them fince Joinua Capt. General of Ilrael. he affured them they could obtain his Favour by other way but by Obedience; which he thought hi felf obliged to admonish them of before his De ture out of this Life, that he was certain was just at Hand: as he ended these Words, he gave the Ghoft, and died in the hundred and tenth if of his age, whereof he spent forty as Minister un Mofes, their chief Magistrate, and after his Dead governed the Common-wealth Twenty five Years. Man of incomparable Prudence and Eloquence, diligent in Matters of Government, and equally pable of the most important Affairs in Peace and W in a Word the most excellent Captain General of Time, whose only Presence was worth Hundred others, whose Soldiers thought nothing impo under him, and by whom his Enemies esteemed to felves vanquished as foon as feen : But let us rem ber while we speak of Joshua, that God hath con him with the Rays of Glory, so that we are firained to cover his brave Acts in Silence. He in the Year, from the Creation of the World 2 and about one thousand five hundred Years by avenue Veines For he tiding express vic.

Ministra behave, whether the sign billions in water las dyng should so the black to all sales Time bornes the spay I will to second report the shorth from at wing tomate with the pall of the or blerge God we go undergrant the schriften his pictoriol since been pich of Condition was lack orthogod in the about boundered by the

the Birth of Christ.

AVI Whole whose a great (hough tater r aul at d obta orthy'

m man eigned then L

DAVID, King of ISRAE L.

AVID a Man was after God's oven Heart, Who wondrous Bleffings did to him impart, whose affishance in his Youth he kill'd great Golinh, and so won the Field; hough he made this might, Monster fall, atter rose, the fealousy of Saul, aul at length in Battle overthrown, d obtains the Kingdom, and the Crown; orthy's Name he justly doth deserve, memory Worthes did obey and serve. eigned forty, lived seventy Years, then Death put an End to all his Cares.

F

THE Life of David is a Mixture of Good Eyil, of Joy and Grief, of Contempts Glories, of Vices and Virtues, of Actions and Palls of unthought of Successes, and of strange Accid and Marvels. We will confider him in a two-State, of a Servant and of a Mafter, and will obli with what Wisdom he preserved himself in and with what Majesty he behaved himself in other. He comes first to Court under the Qualit a Mufician, there he makes himself known for a Soldier, admired as a Commander of an Army, crowned as a Conqueror. Saul was tormented an evil Spirit, which was maintained by his me choly Humour, and nourished by his Passion. feek out for him a fair young Man, who with skilful in playing on the Harp, to make him me one of his Servants faid, That David the So Jesse, was fit for that Employment; he is fen in the King's Name, he comes, he pleafeth whi playeth on his inftruments; but Sanl is diffe when he handleth his Weapons.

This young Shepherd, who in his Apprentic had learn'd to fight with Lions and Bears, would to the War as well as his Brethren, who blar Curiofity, and despise his Person. There musually some famous Exploit to put a Man at great Credit at Court, and the Combat of was that which Heaven had prepar'd to raise Done Man alone, who affrighted the whole nine Foot high, and armed with five hundred Weight of Iron, continues for forty Days his Bravado's, challengeth the stoutest of the Israel combat. All their Hearts were frozen at the of his terrible Voice, and none dares come forth him. The King propounds great Riches, a

D

ugh

Ble

ble :

eupo

i. n

12 fuffi

not i

25 mpio

im (

ing;

ear,

e in

d of

y fco

Heav

min

ad fro reat I

h of

tknow

faith i

he Blo

and m

Momer

with

of the ory of

hat De

m, the

ongs

above

vil Spir

Yet

ughter in Marriage, to him who would take away Blemish from the People of God, printed on the ple Face of the Army by this Philistine. David eupon presents himself, and gets forth to fight with not with the gilded Arms of Saul, but only a Sling. The Giant scoffs at him; and finding sufficiently armed to defend himself from Dogs, not fit to fet upon Men, he deligns David's little vas a fit Prey for some Bird of Rapin. But this mpion of the Lord of Hosts, reads first a Lesson im of Religion, before he shews his Skill in ing; 'Thou comest to met (faith he) with a ear, a Sword and a Buckler; but I come to e in the Name of the God of Armies, of the d of the Hosts of Ifrael, at which thou hast this y scoffed with so great Insolence: It is written Heaven, that this great God will deliver thee mine Hands, and that I shall take away thine ad from off thy Shoulders, and that I shall make reat Feaft for all the Beafts of Prey with the h of this thy monstrous Body, whereby thou know there is a God in Ifrael.

faith it, he doth it, he strikes his Adversary he Blow of the Sling in the midst of his Fore-and makes this mighty Tower of Flesh to fall Moment, cutting off the Head of this terrible with his own Sword; which put the whole of the Philistines to Consusion, and raised up ory of the chosen People to an incomparable. Yet this is the Fountain of all the great hat David after suffer'd, the great ones adm, the People applaud him, he is the Subject Songs of the Daughters of Jerusalem, which above Saul. It was this Musick that enraged will Spirit, and would not give him any Rest;

lan m

f

D

e ed his

the

David must be destroyed, because he saved the Na tion; he must be put to Death, because he restore the People to Life; he must be dishonoured for having recovered the Honour of the King; he is sufficient faulty, because he his too virtuous. Saul resolved be rid of David, yet thought it dangerous to attem his Life openly, who was so high in the People Efteem, and therefore under Pretence of Home bestows on him a chief Place in the Army, believe his Courage would carry him into Danger, and his Death would be imputed to Chance or Defin but when he faw he returned from manifest Pe with Victory and the Applause of Ifrael, and that behaved himself with great Wisdom, Saul suspet him more than before, and injuriously married eldest Daughter to another. But fince his Hon was engaged, and to prevent the Scandal of Fi leffness, he offers him his youngest Daughter Min but with very harsh and dangerous Conditions, no than by the Death of two hundred Philistines, wh he hoped it was hardly possible for him to vanque but herein God who overthrows the Defigns of malicious to establish his own Councils upon Ruins, caused the Victories and Marriage of D to succeed to his own Content, accompanied the good Will and Admiration of all the Court.

Jonathan, the eldest Son of Saul, was so asson with his valiant Exploits, rare Virtues, and in parable Carriage, that he loved him as his own hand berest himself of the most precious Thing had, to adorn him withal; David likewise unto him reciprocally an immortal Friendship, their two Souls seemed united together with a dissoluble Affection. Poor Jonathan who was comparable Mildness, declared to his Father, as rvice ere v rmlef Joy n alw th the d dri Sau rp in h his t evil fidiou Spiri Reco h W re wa him to d De Fears aul se s Solo e ha es his ht, p Mor ng on bal w

the ex

to it,

ffill"

daily

he or

id kno

taker

he d

he durft, the Innocence of David, and the great rvices he had done to the Crown; affuring him, ere was not a Man in the Kingdom of a more rmless and pleasing Conversation; and that it was Joy of his Heart, and his only Safety to have n always at his Side. Saul feemed to be overcome th these Discourses, and suffered David whom he driven far off, to return again near his Person; Saul, upon a Day when David played on the rp in his Presence, endeavour'd to strike him thro' h his Launce, had not David's Nimbleness avoided tevil Blow; and left any should charge him with fidioutness, he excused it by the Distemper of Spirit. Jonathan yet another Time endeavour'd Reconciliation; but being repelled by Saul, with h Words and Threats to kill him, he faw clearly re was no more Safety for his Friend, and perfuadim to retire; David goes from Court, and makes d Departure from his beloved Jonathan, thousands. Tears and Sighs being vented betwixt them.

t ed in

10 wh day of

Da

rt. oni ind H

ing

p, aul seeing he was escaped out of his bloody Hands, is Soldiers to bring him back; which Michal his is having notice of, she tells her Husband, and tes him depart suddenly in the deep Silence of the ht, putting in his Place an Image in the Bed; Morning Saul's Guards break into the House, and ing on to the Bed, there found the Counterfeit; bal was accused thereof, and chidden by Saul; she excused herself, saying, Her Husband compelled to it, threatning to ki'l ber if she would not obey, still encreased his Rage, and caused him to indaily new means to destroy him, whom above all the ought to have preserved. In the mean Time, it was not whither to retire himself; he would taken the Boldness to have gone to Samuel, who was yet alive, but this would have been prejudicial both in the Mind of Saul, who turned all Sufp cions into Fury; he therefore goes to the Town Nob to Abimelech the High Prieft, who feeing him a very mean Equipage, was somewhat amazed at h Arrival. But David to confirm him, faid he can about some urgent Bufiness of the King's, and had Time to provide for his Journey, defiring the Pri to give him some Bread and a Sword: who, havi no other gave him fome Loaves of the confecrat Bread, and the Sword, of Goliab which was kept the Tabernacle for a Monument.

F

Saul hearing that David was feen in the Woo with a Launce in his Hand, and accompanied with veral Captains and Officers, tharply complained of unfaithfulnels of his Servants; whereupon Doeg, Edomite, of a barbarous Behaviour, to get Favour our hi his Master, accused Spimelech the Priest with all Company for furnishing David with Weapons a sintai Provisions, he being present at that Time; & the instantly fent for him, and reproached him with Fact; he wisely excused it. as not knowing but Da lines. was as much in the King's Favour as ever, and thelieve what he did was for Saus's Service, as he judged. To delive Excuse was very just and lawful, yet the Jealousy elf the Saul was never fatisfied, so that without any ol od, he Form of Proceeding, he commanded that villain b, w Butcher Doeg (all others refufing to lift up their Ha flured against these sacred Persons) to fall upon the H hat his Priest, and the Priests that accompanied him, eigean w five in Number, who were all murdered in one D roops and that curfed Servant exceeding his Commilled, to drove on his Murders to the Town of Neb, whened they filled with Fire and Blood.

David having understood by Abiatbar, the Son

Deat the d hin ght h ather out,

High

bit

now Thoug forted

entat

to ' w wha all I rable rtrefs

Love

red be

the

vi

at ot

00

h. ft

g, |

ur 11

3. 1

th

ot

ain

High Priest, all that was past, was pierced with bitter Grief, according himself as the Cause of Death of these unhappy ones; and perceiving the Spirit of Saul was wholly envenomed, he d himself in the Cave of Adullam, where tho' he ght himself hid from the Eyes of all the World, yet ather and Brethren flying the Persecution, found out, and wounded his/ tender Heart with their entations for the Change of his Condition, who now no longer a David triumphant, the Object of houghts, and the Discourse of all Tongues; he forted them the best he could, and recommended to the Protection of the King of Moab, till he what it pleased God to do with him. At this, all the banished that fled for Safety, and all the rable betook themse ves to David, to the Number our hundred Men, who intrenched themselves in stress, going forth every Day to seek wherewithal aintain themselves. In the midst of these Missorthe good Prince kept always in his Heart a Love of his Country; and knowing that the Da fines had la'd Siege before Keilab, he failed not It dieve it; tho' this ungrateful City designed to T delivered him up to Saul, if he had enclosed usy elf therein; which, having consulted the Oracle od, he would not do, but retired to the Defart Ha usured him that he should be King after his Father, hat himself would be content to be his Second.

eig can while David ran from Defart to Defart with, De Troops, when he received a severe Check stom whered to destroy his Family, had not Abigail who red before him with great Wildom and Humility, Son the Sword already drawn for the Desolation of her Family. The Philifines about this Time taken the Field, whom Saul having encountered driven back, he returns to the Pursuit of David, three thousand Men, and entering into a Cave Necessity, where David was hid with a small Num of his most faithful Servants, they perfuaded him, f by the Hand of God his mortal Enemy was now wered into his Power, by whose Death he might put End to all his Calamities. But David by a strong spiration from God, resolved in his Heart never lay Hands on God's anointed, and contented him with only cutting off the Skirts of his Garment, went out of the Cave after Saul, and cried after with a loud Voice, faying, Behold my Lord, Father, my King, the Innocence of my Hands, be no more filled with vain and false Suspicions poor David; you cannot be ignorant, that Go this Time had put you into my Power, and the Army could have taken away your Life to have faved own, but God by his Grace hath preserved met fuch ill Thoughts, and hath fecured you from y Mis Danger; I had never yet any Intent to hurt though you cease not to prosecute and torment most Life with a thousand Afflictions; Alas, my le Breth what is your Defire? Against whom are your their forth with fo great a Strength of Arms and Hor Against a poor dead Dog, a miserable little Bea befeech thee living God to be judge between us, to make you sensible of the Goodness of my C Saul was so amazed with this Action, that he ra him, and embracing him weeping, faid, This, OD is a fure Sign aubereby I know for certain thou shalt Town after me, so great a Goodness not being able to be rem wertoo but by an Empire: I only beseech and intreat you to Wive pity upon my poor Children after my Death, and not an awa but ed fro vid re g of ehe c never the fa e upo n he f

listines being rbed n his арру unde efore by S

Onfe

ble Far red, fi

ef, uni Vhile t uing th e upon them the Injuries I have offered you, Herehe swore to deal peaceably with him for the fu-, but the Spirit of Saul was unequal and oft de-ed from Reason for a long Season; whereupon vid resolved to got out of the Kingdom to Achift, g of the Philistines, a sworn Enemy to Ifrael, the could not be fecure any where elfe; yet did never bear Arms against the People of God. Ar the fatal Day of Saul drew near, and he law the istines came upon him with their utmost Strength; being troubled in Mind, in the Confusions of a rbed Spirit, he fought to the divine Oracle to n his Diftiny in this present Necessity; but this appy Prince Tought after the Dead in vain, having under Feet the Admonitions of the Living; and efore he applies himself to the Witch of Ender, by Samuel's Appearance, foretold the routing of Army; and next Morning perceiv'd the Philiftines derfully encreased and resolved to fight, and his People exceedingly weakened, and feemed to y Misfortune in their Faces: The Enemy gave Onset with great Violence, and overthrew the most of the Ifraelites, wherein Jonathan with his Brethren fealed the last Proofs of their Valour their Blood and Death, in the Sight of their mible Pather; who feeing he could not die foon as he red, suffered himself to fall upon his own Sword, iting forth his Soul and Blood with Ragings and ef, unspeakable.

ı

d

ef

m

L

oi

eal

IS, C

ra D

alt

to sof

While this unhappy Battle was fought, David was uing the Amalekites, who in his Absence had sack'd Town of Ziglag, the Place of his retiring, whom wertook loaded with their Prey and regained his Wives, Abincam and Abigail, whom they had a way: As he came from this Battle, a young

Amalekite

Amalokite presents himself, and brings him the Ne of the Death of Saul and Jonathan, and his of Sons, affirming that he himself, had stood by at Death of the King, and had helped him to die by own Command: Whereat David, moved with tream Grief, tore his Garments, wept, fasted, made a Funeral Lamentation over Saul and Jonatha caufing likewise the Amalekite to die, who by his or Confession was accessary to the death of the Kin And tho' David at this Time might have taken p fession of the Kingdom, yet upon prudent deliber tion, he thought it not convenient to be too ha Whereupon Abner, a chief Captain without los Time, feeing there yet remained a Son of Saul, all named Isbosheth, aged forty Years, though of li Courage, and less understanding, he made him fently come into the Camp, and caused him to proclaimed the true and lawful Successor of Saul; fo much for the Love he bore him, or the Esteem of Sufficiency, as intending to reign by him, and overh

All the People swore Allegiance to Ilhboshoth, cept the Tribe of Judah, from whom David sprus which joining together in savour of him, crows him King in Hebron, where he reigned seven to before he possess the whole Kingdom of Israel. As ward Abner, laying aside his warlike humour, sell Love with a Concubine of Saul's, named Rissa whereat Ishbosheth being offended, Abner for one p Word spoken in a very mild manner, entered in Rage against the King, and said, It was to use him a Dog to quarrel with him for a Woman after so go Services as he had done for the Crown, and from whe held both his Life and Kingdom. The poor Priheld his Peace and durst not answer a Word to this below, and was pitifully devoured by his own field in the second sec

ched

pro

binte

ing t

Wife

made conduct this bner; who is the must be the must be the Ki Dece he out er: Ai enger of trea ved it, treach

of the

Abner grew so hot with Anger, that he disched Messengers to David to desire his Friendship, promiseth to bring the whole Kingdom of Isbonino his Hands. David answered, That he was ing to make Peace with him, if he would cause Wise Michael to be restored to him, whom they had ried to another after his Departure; which was ily agreed to, and performed.

0

F. Po

TUI

W

Aft

ell

Sp4

p

bin

n

Mean Time Abner powerfully folicits the People frael to betake themselves to David, fince God committed their Safety and Rest into his Hands, would unite all the Tribes under one Monarchy, th would make him a Happiness to his People, ful to his Friends, and terrible to his Enemies. Discourse prevailed very much upon the prin-Ones of the Nation, who faw small Hopes of beth, he being disparaged both by Nature and une. Soon after Abner meets David at Hebron, made him a Feaft, hearkened to his Propositions conducted him back with Honour. Foab, who at this Time absent, foon understood the coming bner; and being jealous that the Friendship of a who feemed to draw a whole Kingdom after him, t much prejudice his Interest, he enters roughly the King's Chamber, telling him that Abner was Deceiver, who came to fpy out his Secrets, and he ought to have secured him when under his er: And fince David, feeing him in fuch a Rage, ered nothing. Joab, without Authority, fends 2 enger to Abner to return to Hebron, under Coof treating more fully with David. He lightly ved it, and came back the fame Way; when treacherpusly surprizing him, killed him at the of the City:

wid was very much perplexed hereat, and uttered

SMO II

grievous Curses against Joab and his whole Race; to deface the Blemish of this Murder, he assist the Funerals of Abner, protesting against the Conference of those who had taken away his Life, and his setting forth the Praises of the Dead; yet he was not able to destroy him in such a Time it was dangerous to provoke him. After this, sheth King of Israel, was slain by two Murde Rechab and Baanab, as he stept on his Bed at N day, who cut off his Head and brought it to Deat which this King was so highly incensed, at ring this barbarous Fact, that he instantly condended them to Death; and their Heads and Feet being off, they were hanged up at the Fish-pond of He

The death of Ubbofbeth, the Son of Saul, the Difference between the two Royal Houses, all the Tribes yielded universally to David, fo now he began to reign absolutely, and to discove admirable Qualities and Royal Virtues wherewi was adorned : And it is certain, that of all the of Judab, none equalled him in all Kinds of fection, he was one who feared God without S flition, was religious without Hypocrify, without flernness, liberal without reproaching good Husband without Coverousness, valiant w Insolence, vigilant without Unquietness, Wife out Subtilty, courteous without Loofnels, Hi without Cowardliness, in cheerful without too Familiarity, Grave without Fierceness, and without any Compliment : Above all, he was Life very zealous for Religion, and wonderful fected toward divine Things, fettling the World God, and composing Hymns for the People, have continued to all Ages, and ferve for per

, an inft t tes, inft hap de Le gain ed Ju ch'd brou had Was ft, ad Peop adow e, wi Tr the Top er Ga and I rings

le E

r; l

How Whoes frends hat he

for

Prete

Hone

ings of Devotion even to this very Day: Yet did le Exercises no Way diminish his Actions of Var: he overthrew the Philistines in two great Batand made War on every Side; in the East, inft the Moabites, and Ammonites: in the West, inft the Phanicians; in the South, against the Amates, Arabians, and Idumeans; and in the North, inst the Syrians, Sabeans, and Mesopotamians, and happy in all his Enterprizes ; besides which, he le Leagues with the Kings, his Neighbours, which gain'd either by Friendship or Force, He rened Justice exactly to his Subjects, favoured Arts. ch'd and fortify'd Towns, erected stately Palaces, brought the Kingdom of Judab out of Servility, had not yet known what Magnificence was: was honoured by the great Ones, beloved by the t, admired by the Wifelt, and almost adored by People. But as all Light in mortal Things have adow, God suffered him to fall into a great Ofe, which ferved to humble him, and caused very h Trouble in his House: His Mind being freed the Cares of War and Business, he descried from Top of his Palace a Woman that bathed herfelf t S r Garden : he enquired her Name, her Kindand her Quality, and becoming in Love thereby, for her to his House, and had Company with LW How dear did this unhappy Cast of his Eye cost i'e When a Man once exceeds in this blind Passion, H oes further than ever he designed. She soon af-00 ends. Word to David, that the had conceived; and hat her Husband, having not seen her for a long might have very ill Apprehensions of her. eful Honour of this loft Creature must now be coorth , the King fends for her Husband under some le, Pretence; he comes from the Army, is kindly per

ng Ha

fo

ve wit

e I

of

entertained, and David is earnest with him to home and take his Ease with his Wife; but the go Man refuses it, saying That it was not fit for his he in a Bed, when the Ark of God and his Can Joab were under Tents. He lies on the Ground bel the Door of the King's Chamber, and fo paffeth Night, having no defire but to return speedily to Army. Alas, poor Uriab, thou art made a ham Sacrifice; and was but too faithful, and there must water with thy Blood the Guilt of thy Mal David dictates a Bloody Letter to Joab, to p rid of him; and Uriab carries this deadly Land in Joab, without enquiring obeys; the innocent U e ha is massacred, and those false Lovers now think the noce selves secure; David remains nine Months con ssion is maffacred, and those false Lovers now think the with this Filth and Blood, without coming to leafor Knowledge of himself, until Nathan the Prophs moves the Veil that blinded him, who though knew how dangerous it was to reprove a King especially in such a Case, yet resolved to shew D his Sin, by uttering a Parable of a rich Man that great Store of Sheep, who had yet violently t away one only Ewe from a poor Man; which I finding very strange, judged him worthy of De whereat the Prophet hits him Home telling He was the Man, who had caused poor Uriah to be ing as it were out of a deep Sleep, acknowled his Sin with a true, Humility, and submitted hi to all the Chastisements it should please the Judge to inslict upon him; he was presently ch into another Man, and was exceeding penitent Heart bleeding, and his Eyes weeping continuous offence; and God beginning Punish

dul A hic m, deft

ni

hi

ar. tain es t ls h

m,

ocee ft, 1 t en

ouse! ng Ai lt diffe other avid rft no ved hi Abjak do hi pt his make er, and d the er Am nishments of his Sin (which yet he had pardoned as his own Person) caused the Child conceived in dultery to die.

7-2 6

Ld

U

COV

to

phet

ugi

ng,

v D that

y t

De

ing

to be d bi

the y ch

iten

onti pnin

inis

A Year after, those pitiful Tragedies of his House, hich the Lord had threatned him with came upon m, and filled his Heart with Terrors. Amnon, the tel Son of David, fell in Love with his Sifter Thaer, a very fair Princes; and being in despair of taining his Defire, falls fick; the King his Father es to see him, to take Order for his Health; who Is him, there is but one Medicine that will cure m, which is, that his Sifter Thamas should come d make him Broth with her own Hand, wherein e had much Skill. This is easily granted, and the nocent Maid goes to him, who foon discovers his fion to her, which the as violently oppofes by calons and Tears; whereupon this barbarous Man oceeds to Force, and ravishes her which being if, he entered into as furious a Repentance; and t enduring to behold her, drives her out of his ouse with Reproach and Scorn; she puts on Mourng Attire, and covers her Head with Ashes, and at It discovers all to Absalom, her Brother by the same other, who comforts her, and promifes Revenge; wid hears of it, but remembering his own Offence, rft not censure that of his Son, especially fince he ved him tenderly, and feared to offend him. Absalom seeing David did nothing in it, resolved rid 2 owle do himself Justice with his own Hands; and having pt his Defign fecret two Years, to prevent Suspicion, makes a Royal Feaft, to which he invites his Faer, and all his Brethren; David excuses himself, d the other earnestly intreats that his eldest Bro-It Annon might supply his Place; to which his ther consents. The Brethren enter joyfully into the Hall where the Banquet was, where Abfalom he prepared a bloody Spectacle, and horrible Sacrifice he gives the Word to his Servants, that when his B ther Annon had drank plentifully, they should to their Opportunity to kill him, without enquiring the Cause, fince the Command was sufficient Authori and Security ; the Wine and good Cheer having made them merry, on a fudden drawn Swords gl tered before their Eyes; Fear came upon all, but Danger was only to Amnon, who was suddenly ma dered, his Blood leaping on her Brother's Table a just Revenge of his shameful Lust. The Breth affrighted, inflantly fly; and Report brings the News to David, that Abfalom had flain all his B thren; the poor King casts himself on his Face up the Ground weeping, and all the Court tear the Cloaths, and put on Mourning, when Jonadab of tifies that none but Amnon was killed, in revenge the Offence committed against Thamar. David turns a little to himself, and his other Children p fent themselves before him affrighted and weeping that which had paffed, !

the

Absalom faves himself in the House of his Gran father by the Mother, the King of Gelbur, where remains three Years without daring to fee the Ki his Father, who would no ways pardon this gr Crime. Joab labours to reconcile the Son to the ther, by the Mediation of a discreet Woman of Tekn and at length prevails. Absalom returns, the Ki embraces him, gives him the Kiss of Peace, and establishes him in the Court. The Spirit of Prince was high and tempestuous, and being made, courteous, liberal, courageous, and capa of great Undertakings; he entertained ambini Thoughts: he faw his Father declining, Adon, of for hi s eldeft et a Ch ncéive ands: mself a gain t bjects. ourtefies called their " no othe ired wi o hear hem Jui Charge o atisfacti By this arts : a cian, ge ron, W

Follow

erates,

old mar

self to

Forces

ice, at hing but

felf in t

that g

n his b

rs in hi

e him b

Parien

and a

entered

seldest Brother, too much a fondling, and Solomon, at a Child, unable to oppose him, and therefore neceived the Kingdom could not stip out of his lands; and the better to secure it; he provided miels a Guard of Soldiers, and ceased not secretly gain the Hearts and good Will of his Father's bjects. Never was any Prince more prodigal of his outestes! whoever had any Business with the King, called them to him, embraced them, and enquired their Condition and Suit, and said. There was no other Mishap, but that the King was old and ired with Business, and had not appointed any one to hear the Complaints of his Subjects, and do hem Justice; but if one Day he should have that Charge due to him by his Birth, he would give full atisfaction to every one.

by this means he made himself Conqueror of arts : and by the Advice of Achitophel a great Potian, gets leave of David to perform a Vow in ron, whither he goes accompanied with many of Followers, giving Order to the rest of his Conerates, that at the first Sound of a Trumpet they ald march to him; which being done, he caused self to be crowned King in Hebron, and that all forces of the Kingdom ran to him. This poor nce, at the Tidings of this Rebellion, thinks of hing but flying, and leaves his chief City to fave self in the By Paths of the Wilderness; he is the that goes forth, without a Horse to ride on, a his bare Feet, with his Head uncovered and is in his Eyes, marching thus like a true Peniand adoring the Judgments of God, which is him bear the enraged Tongue of Shimei with a Patience, and would not fuffer him to be chafoni d for his horrid Infolence. Mean while Absalom entered Jerusalem without Resistance, where Add tophel to make the Difference irreconcilable, gar him the detestable Counsel to abuse his Father's Cou cubines that were left in the Palace. After he ha performed this Villany, he contrives to suprprize h Father at unawares; which, by Achitophel's Subtile might have probably succeeded had not Husbai, a cret Friend of David's, who join'd himself to Able lom on Purpose to discover his Designs, prevented to Plot by this cunning Speech, 'That they should nothing haftily, fince his Father was an old Ca tain, and politick in War, who had still in his! my Men of Valour and Counsel; and that it for not with his Honour to give Battle, unless he w affured of the Victory; for if at the first Enco ter he should be repulsed, it would be of danger Consequence, and might so discourage his M that his whole Army might be routed; but if would flay awhile, the People would gather him as the Sand upon the Sea Shore; and be in the midst of such a mighty Army, nothing wo be able to fland before him.' This Counsel be preferred bfore Achitophel's he was fo enraged, he goes instantly home and hangs himself, by then manifest Justice of God, after which Absalom, this ing himself sufficiently strong, passes over Jon makes Amasa his chief Captain, and defigns to Battle to his Father; David having had a little fure to recollect and fortify himself, takes Cou again, and dividing his Army into three Parts, points Joash, Abisha, and Ittai to command it would have been present himself had not his Co diffuaded him; therefore encouraging his People, charging them strictly, if they should gain the

, to fe red out The T vid's A but t e foon y feem lain, tv dom aft on his Head be Jule lef Specta tude to e struc dden b at Heap ument Beh a rebel fuch wi e this v Town, iring of News ca plent a nd of hi

all Cou in my So or me, that down was turned telling

, to fecure his Son Abfalom without any hurt, he red out of the Camp.

he Trumpets found, and the Armies approach. pid's Men having a good Cause, engage like Libut the Rebels affrighted with their own Guilt, e foon difordered, and put to flight, fo that one y feemed to come only to kill, and the other to lain, twenty Thousand falling dead on the Place; dem aftonished at this sudden Change of Fortune, on his Mule, and flies through a Forest; where Head being caught within the Branch of a Tree, fule left him hanging between Heaven and Earth, Spectacle of the Vengeance of God, for his Intude to so good a Father; of which Joab having e struck him through with three Darts, though dden by David, and ten young Soldiers made nd of him: The Body was interr'd in a Pit under at Heap of Stones, though he had built a flately ument for himself, which he called Absalom's Behold the horrible End of an evil Son, a rebellious Subject, sufficient to deter Posterity fuch wicked Practices to the End of the World. e this was doing, David enclosed himself in a Town, expecting the Event, and continually ring of the Health of Absalom; but when cer-News came of his Death, he was pierced with blent a Grief that he could not be comforted, all Courage, and crying every Moment, O Ab-, my Son Absalom, O that this Favour bad been or me, that I might have died for thee! Every all down his Eyes for Pity, and the whole Vicvas turned into Sorrow.

the bb, always bold and insolent toward his Master, thes David, thinking thereby to justify his own telling him, 'That he would put to Confusion all his Faithful Servants, who had that Day far his Life, his House and Kingdom; that he see of a very firange Nature, to hate those that les him, and love them that hated him, fince it plain that if all his good Captains and Soldiers perished to fave the Life of one Rebellious Son, "would have been very well fatisfied :' Further, fwore to him by the living God: 'That if he not rife and entertain those who returned from Battle, there would not one Man remain with before Morning; which would prove a gre Displeasure than ever yet happened to him. presses him so vehemently, that the King with daring to answer one Word, rose up, and did a required. By degrees his great Grief diminished, the Rejoicings of the People, who came to carry back to Jerusalem in Triumph, made him forget Lofs; and endeavouring to bring back all to him, pardoned them with unspeakable Meekness, b ready to give Joab's Place to Amafa, Abfalom's Captain. But Joah quickly prevented this, by ing with his own Hand, him who was defigned Successor. After this he pursued Sheba, a Car of the Rebels, who retired into Adela, which be befreged by Joab, a Woman of great Discretion Credit with the People, perfuaded them to flay and throw his Head over the Wall; which pu End to this whole bloody War.

After David's re-establishment in his Kingdom reigned about eleven Years in full Peace, an continual Exercises of Piety and Justice; and all ling the States of his Realm he made his Son Sol whom he had chosen, to be consirmed King is stead. He lived near seventy two Years, reforty, and died a Thousand and Thirty Two fore the houland of Treat on the sa speed born of him, for soft set in an his Hall Name from thor of

's Perfe

t from 1

fore the Birth of our Saviour, and about Three housand from the Creation of the World, leaving A Treasures for building the Temple as an eternal onument of his Devotion and Understanding. s a special Favour to him, that Jesus Christ should born of his Line, and that his Birth was revealed him, fo long before it was known to the World. oft fets it down on the Table of his Pfalms, and s in an Extacy in Contemplation by the Fore tafte his Happiness. Men usually take their Nobility Names from their Predecessors; but David drew from a Son, who is the Father of Glory, and thor of Eternity. All things were great in Da-'s Person; but the height of all this Greatness is, t from his Family there was given to us a JESUS.

> Fredhill Control The state of the s

> > Land But a transfer bear .

Buttle and welling or come mer and show the self- in the real best week the year the frame the said of the said of the said

The Carriege wanted not be for the court from them Low mains our lendy souls sinus of the derry fact bill Life, and J. apried.

GS water of the JUDAS

JUDAS MACCABEUS.

HIS valiant Worthy, for his Country's Cause And in defending of Gods's Truth and Laws, Was fill engag'd, and often with a few, He Thousands of bis Enemies did subdue. Their Number nor their Strength be did not fear, Hoping that God would fill for him appear, Who fought his Battle and would ne'er comply To wicked Heathenish Idolatry. At length, for look by almost all his Men, His Courage would not suffer bim, even then To fly away, but being with killing tir'd, He dearly fold bis Life, and so expired.

FT his Capta g of ned in us to by 1 the C rld 37 robb'd ble, C lels de behin of the the Ea barba tinual 1 w then perfift n Son nflancy overtu ngled y Mother ne Buile t now ous a S rage to midst t n name s; all N

to retire

mbled h

nft the

moned

FTER the Death of Alexander the Great his Army and Dominions were divided between Captains, among whom Seleucus made himself g of Syria. And afterwards Antiochus Epiphanes ned in Afia, who being invited by some Apostate us to come to ferufalem, he encamped before it, by his Faction within had the Gates opened, the City betrayed to him, about the Year of the rld 3796, and before the Nativity of Christ 198. robb'd the Temple, and carried away the golden ble, Candlestick, and Cenfors, with all the other lels dedicated to God leaving nothing of any Vabehind him, and raifing fuch a horrible Perfecuof the Jews, that the Heavens feemed to weep, the Earth to blush with Blood; it was a Sport to barbarous Man to prophane holy Things and a tinual Exercise to flea and roast Men alive, or to w them into boiling Caldrons, for no other Crime perfifting in the true Religion, as he did by the n Sons of the Maccabees, whose Courage and stancy out-braved all his most ex quisite Tortures. overturned the Altars upon the bleeding Priefts, igled young Children in the Bo om of their figh-Mothers, the Flames devoured the facred and prone Buildings without Distinction, and the Houses t now feemed but Dens of Beafts) represented fo ous a Spectacle, as gave more defire to die than rage to live.

midst these Desolations was found a gallant old a named Matthias, a Priest, the Father of many s, all Men of Valour, who went out of Jerusato retire himself to the City of Modin, where he abled his Family, resolving to oppose themselves inst the Fury of the Tyrants; but was quickly moned to render up himself and all his Men, and

In the

med wit

ns fell

o flew

diers w

tar, and

ed to the

Let the red with

s and C

the Kin

ions to

lews al

than co

aslaulte

n in the

hemfelv

e thou

e deftro

s with who t

fight o

were g

bled a

Altars,

ion, co

and d

had a ving the ring hi

ns, 7

to offer Incense to their Pagan Idols. But this vin ous Man calling his People together, spake thus ng ever them; 'We should be too much in Love with Li hether in to keep it with the Loss of true Religion; I om amo forry that ever I was born in fuch an Age as mmand have feen the Difasters of my Nation, and the D folation of the holy Jerusalem, abandon'd to Hands of Rapine and to impious Prophanation; . Temple hath been the Object of all Reproach and those Vessels of Glory that served for the initry of the Living God have been taken away · Violence; we have feen our Streets covered w dead Bodies, and the little Children with the Throats cut lying upon the Carcases of their I thers; and what Nation hath not possessed our l heritance, and enriched themselves with our Spoil the Holine's of the Temple hath not stained far · legious Hands, neither hath this famous City be able to preferve itself from Flames; after this, wh Pleasure can we have in Life, unless it be to t venge the Quarrel of God? I am promifed all the · Honours and Privileges I can reasonably hope to if I will obey King Antiochus, and join with the Apostates, who have so basely betrayed their Fait but God forbid that I should ever fall into so hid ous a Compliance; when almost all my Nation have conspired to forfake the Law of their Go and accommodate themselves to the Times, at their Prince's Will; I can answer for myself, m Children and my Brethren, and can affure myle they will never commit fo vile a Crime. Let those that have a Zeal for true Religion, join then · felves with us, and know that among fo many M feries there is nothing better than to proceed in the Ways of Religion and Glory, though with the La of our dearest Blood and Life.'

In the mean time the King's Commissioners prefng every one to declare himself, one of the Jews, bether induced by Terror, or Reward, steps forth om among the People to facrifice according to the mmand of the King; wherewith Matthias enmed with Zeal, was so displeased, that he and his ns fell upon him and hew'd him to pieces; they o flew Apollonius, the King's Captain, and their diers who withstood them; then he overthrew the tar, and with a loud Voice, faid, All that are afed to the Laws of their Fathers, and the Service of I, let them follow me; whereupon many of them red with their Wives and Children into the Des and Caves, but were foon purfued and overtaken the King's Caprains, who again renewed their Perions to them to offer Sacrifice to the Idols; which lews absolutely refusing, and resolving rather to than commit such Impiety, these bloody Persecuassaulted them on the Sabbath-Day, and burnt n in their Caves, who neither refisted nor defendtemfelves, left they should prophane the Sabbath: e thousands of Men, Women and Children were destroyed, yet divers escaped, and joined thems with Matthias, and chose him for their Capwho then informed them that they might lawfight on the Sabbath if they were affaulted, elfe were guilty of their own Deaths; and having bled a sufficient Number he destroyed the Hea-Altars, and flew those who had forsaken their ion, commanding them to circumcife their Chiland driving from every Place those whom Anhad appointed to fee the Laws executed. ving thus governed one Year, he fell fick, and ving his Death to approach, he fent for his ns, John, Simeen, Judas Maccabeus, Eleazer, and Jonathan, whom he earnestly exhorted to follow his Steps in maintaining the Law of God, and fighting for their Country, affuring them of the Divine Affi tance, which never fails those who love and fear Go but taking Pleasure in their Virtues, will grant the Favour to recover their former Liberty and Peace And, faith he, God will establishyou in the Possessio of your ancient Laws; and though our Bodies a " mortal, and subject to Death, yet the Memory our virtuous Actions will remain to Eternity; ner doubt therefore to venture your Lives in fo good Cause : but above all, I exhort you to Love a datioch 'Concord; and whatever you find any one mosta, the cand fitted for, let him prosecute the same with my, an Contradiction from the rest. I charge your Brother Simeon, a politick and valiant M rly to Com. in whatever he shall counsel you; but make Ju Maccabeus your Captain, who is courageous an of gr strong; for he shall revenge the Injuries and O stand F rages that have been done to our Nation, and I da; wh put your Enemies to flight ; affift him there reased

· like Men of Valour, and such as fear God, up, and · thereby you shall be fure to prevail.'

Soon after Matthias gave up the Ghoft, and ? Maccabeus was made General, who by the Affift hemselv of his Brethren, and other Jews, drove the En in such out of the Country, and cleanfed the Land of Idola them th which when Apollonius, the General of Antiocha frengthe Samaria, heard, he invaded Judea; against w Day he Maccabeus went forth, and in a terrible Battle newly threw and killed Apollonius taking his Camp, rding to therein a very rich Booty, together with his Struntryme After this, Seron Governour of Calofyra, wil is our Affishance of many apostate Jews, marched a present

d faf coura confift oward hat v Thouf:

preva

de, th

urage

v then rest ef

lea; wh iers to 1 in God uraged at their great Numbers, and because they disabled for long, and were thereby disabled, he couraged them, saying. That Victory did not consist in Numbers of Men, but in their Devotion oward God, who had so assisted their Foresathers, hat with small forces they had often defeated Thousands of their Enemies. They were hereby prevailed upon, that without Fear of their Mulde, they ran all upon Seron, routed his Army, and whem, together with eight hundred of the Syrians, rest escaping by Flight.

Intiochus enraged at this Defeat, commanded Lythe Governor of Egypt, to go with a very strong my, and conquer Judea, and then to sell the Initants for Slaves to those that would give most, and rly to destroy and ruin Jerusalem; Lysias having Command, fent Ptolomy Nicanor and Gorgias, n of great Authority about the King, with forty sand Foot, and seven thousand Horse, to invade ita; who marching to the City of Emaus, greatly reased their Forces. Judas having viewed the p, and Number of his Enemies, exhorted his iers to repose their Confidence and Hope of Vicin God alone, appointing likewise a Fast to humhemselves before God by Supplications and Prayan in such a Time of extreme Danger; and affurthe frengthen them, to put their Adversaries to shame;
w Day he mustered his Army discharges to shame; e newly married, or had lately bought Possessions, rding to the Law; and then spake thus to the rest, P.S untrymen, we had never more Occasion to ex-s our Courage, and contemn Dangers, than at wit present; for if you now fight valiantly, you E die y in this one Battle recover your Liberty, where-CO by you will have Opportunity again to fe the true God, and live a happy Life; but if prove Cowards in this Encounter, you will branded with perpetual Infamy, and endanger utter Extirpation of your Nation; confider the fore that if you fight not you must die; and the contrary affure your felves, that in fighting your Religion, Laws, and Liberties, you shall tain immortal Glory; be ready therefore in Morning to give your mortal Enemies Battle. Immediately News was brought him that a fir Party of Horse and Foot were designed to fall him that Night; whereupon Maccabeus fudd resolved to break into the Enemy's Army the Night, while they were fo divided; having there refreshed himself and his Army, and leaving a Fires in his Camp to deceive the Enemy, he man all Night to feek them out ; Gorgias finding the had forfaken their Camp, imagined that they fled to the Mountains for Fear, diligently pur them; but in the Morning, Judas with only thousand Men ill armed, shewed himself to the En at Emaus, and having observed their Posture, perfuaded his Men, To fight valiantly, fince he certain God would deliver their Enemies into Hands; and thereupon caufing his Trumpets to fo he fell upon them with fuch Fury and Refold that being absolutely affrighted and surprized, instantly gave Ground; and having flain such fifted, he pursued the rest to the Plains of la In this Pight, three thousand of the Enemy killed, yet would he not fuffer his Soldiers to take Spoil, telling them, that they had still to fight Gorgias and his Army, whom when by God they had beaten, they should then securely re, fir Purp for t

felve

rving

readir

Cour

en For lethfur with the mber for that for him e Five

Refolut lose th Army e Juda bavin y of Go purify fices ac

g up wi
Temple
ring wi
and all

ntly ap
Judas
for In ail, and the A

selves with the Booty : Gorgias and his Army rving from a Hill the Flight of their Friends, and readiness of the Jews to give them Battle, were scouraged, that they fled likewise; whereupon wand his Men returned to gather the Pillage; re, finding great Store of Gold, Silver, Scarlet, Purple, they returned home with Joy, praising for their good Success.

has was extreamly concerned at this Overthrow, presently invaded Judea with fixty thousand en Foot, and five thousand Horse, and encamped ethfura, which Judas hearing, came out against with only ten thousand Men; and seeing their ber fo valtly exceed his, he cried earnestly to , that he would be pleased to fight with him, for him, and then charged the Front of the Enewith fuch force, that he discomsted and slew e Five Thousand of them. Lysias perceiving Resolution of the Jews, who would rather die lose their Liberty, he returned with the rest of Army to Antioch, to reinforce them. Mean e Judas affembled the People, and told them, baving obtained fo many Victories through the y of God, they ought now to go up to Jerusalem purify the Temple that was defolate, and to offer fices according to the Law of the Lord Then g up with a great Multitude of People, he found Temple desolate, the Gates burnt, and Grass ing within the fame; at this fad Spectacle, nd all pretent could not forbear weeping, and ntly applied themselves to purge the Temple; Judas caused a Table, a Candlestick, and an for Incense to be made all of Gold, putting up ail, and Gates to the Temple, and throwing the Altar, wich was prophaned by Antiochus, he built a new one of Stones, neither hewed a mers, hammered and on the twenty-first Day of Chall or September, Lights were put in the Candlelled Perfumes laid upon the Altar, Loaves fet upon Table, and Sacrifices offered which had been glected for three Years past; then did Judas and Countrymen celebrate a Feast unto the Lord for a wight h Days, praising God with Hymns and Pfalms; her enclosed Ferufalem with a Wall, and built h Towers thereon, in which he planted Gami against the Incursions of the Enemy, and form

Bethfura for a Defence to it.

The Nations round about envying this Prosper y fled; of the Jews, surprized many of them by Treache whereupon Judas made an Incursion, slew many l means, bringing a great Prey out of their Count befieging the Sons of Baan, their Prince, who lay on after wait for the Jews; and at length fetting fire to it Towers, killed all that were therein. After this, overcame a mighty Army of the Amorites, un River; the Command of Timotheus, taking and burning the City of Jazar, and leading their Wives and Child affily a Captive into Judea. The neighbouring People h ing of his Departure, affaulted the Jews in Galang away who retiring into the Fort of Dathema, fent Judas for Relief; and at the same time, Letters a takin out of Galilee, That they were endangered by the fall Inhabitants of Ptolemais, Tyre, Sydon, and of dwelt thereabout. Judas hereupon fent his Brother Sin Substance with three thousand chosen Men to relieve Ga rew nig and himself, with his Brother Jonathan, and e d up h thousand others, marched to Galaad; Simeon for upon against his Enemies in Galilee, and slew about the Cit thousand, pursuing them to the Gates of Ptola e Inhab and taking much Spoils, and releasing many Je Prilo ng For befieg y in g Inhabi and ki re the s divid oufly a were ne Purf ew all t which. he mar ppose t fure to pected1 endeav

came in

ners, he returned victoriously home. But Judas ng Jordan, was there informed, that his Brethren besieged in their Cities and Castles, and some aly in great Extremity; hereupon he first fell upon Inhabitants of Boxra, took their City, fet it on and killed all able to bear Arms; then marching light he arrived early next Morning to the Castle e the Jews were belieged by the Army of Tiwww. who were just ready to scale the Walls, when dividing his Forces into three Battalions couoully affailed them; who hearing it was Maccawere furprized with fuch Dread, that they inly fled; Judas's Men flaying about eight thousand e Purfuit. Then marching to Molla, he feized ew all the Men therein, and burnt it with Fire; which he destroyed several other Places.

on after Timotheus raised another Army, where -. he marched to Jordan, exhorting them valiantly ppose the Yews, and to hinder their Passage over River; fince, if they once passed Jordan, they fure to be defeated. Judas hearing this, marchaffily against the Enemy, and passing the River, pectedly fell upon them with fuch Violence, that ng away their Arms, they fled for their Lives; endeavour'd to fave themselves in Carnoix, but a taking that City and Temple slew them, and t the fame, and then he led away all the Jews dwelt in Galaad, with their Wives, Children, Substance, and brought them into Judea. When rew nigh the Town of Ephion, they had barridup his Way that he could not pass; and rethe City, took it by Assault, burnt it and slew e Inhabitants. After this, passing over Jordan, came into Judea with great Joy and Gladness, praising praising God, and offering Sacrifices and Thankson for the safe return of the Army, because in all a Battles and encounters they had not lost one? But whilst Judas and Simeon were gone upon a Expeditions, the two Captains with whom he lest the rest of his Forces (with a Command to a watchful Eye over Judea, but not to join he with any Enemy till his Return) being desired gain the Repute of valiant Men, went out with Soldiers towards Jamnia, against whom Gorgias, vernour of that Place, issued out, and slew two sand of them, the rest slying back into Judea. Judas and his Brethren took divers Cities from Idumeans, and with much Booty and great Joy returnour.

The bloody Antiochns being at this Time in Ra, heard of a wealthy City, called Elymais, wh flood a rich Temple of Diana; thither he wen belieged it, but the Inhabitants fallied out, and great Loss drove him from thence; whereupon turned to Babylon, where having Notice of the throw of his Captains in Judea, and the Pow the Jews, this, with his former Defeat, so w upon him, that he fell fick, and finding no Ho Recovery, he called his most familiar Friends him, telling them, 'That he was plagued with violent and desperate Affliction for tormenting 1 Jews, destroying the Temple, committing Sacrilege, and contemning the true God; bu he vowed, if it pleased the Lord to restore he would become a Jew, and do many 'Things for them, and would go thro' all the " World to declare the Power of God;" who ing his Hypocrify, continued to plague him in rible Manner. He had an intolerable pain an dabu at he ble St coulc on, w falem of ru udgm his De or of ful of h hen w d Eug in G g thos crifice: t them his Ari ight, v to per their my of Horfe, aptain ra, a 1 Inhab

t in 1

his Sie vard the vard then rough ped, ea hundre Back, f tin his Bowels and inward Parts, from whence dabundance of Worms continually crawling out, at he rotted above Ground, with such an intoble Stink, that none could come near him, neicould himself endure it; and thus this vile on, who had insolently boasted he would make salem a common Burying-place, and the Streets of run with the Blood of God's People, by his udgment ended his Life in extream Mitery; behis Death he made Philip, his chief Captain, Goor of his Kingdom, requiring him to be very sul of his Son Antiochus.

hen was Antiochus proclaimed King, and fird Eupater; about which Time the apostate in Garrison at Jorusalem, did much Mischief. g those unawares who came to worship and ofcrifices in the Temple; Judas hereupon resolved them off, and accordingly belieged the Fort his Army, when some of the besieged escaping ight, went and defired Antiochus not to fuffer to perish who for his Father's Sake, had fortheir God and Religion; who thereupon fent my of an hundred thousand Foot, twenty thou-Horse, and thirty two Elephants, under Lysial Captain, to relieve them, who fat down before ra, a strong City, but were valiantly refisted Inhabitants, who fallied out, and burnt the s prepared for Battery; whereupon Judas his Siege before the Cattle of Jerusalem, marchvard the Enemy; who preparing to meet him. us then present, caused his Elephants to march rough the narrow Passage where Judas was ped, each Elephant having a thousand Foot hundred Horse for his Goard, with a Tower, Back, furnished with Archers; the rest of his · Forces

y

Forces were ordered to march by the Mount and with great Shouts to affail their Bnemies, by uncovering their brazen and golden Buckler dazzle the Eyes of the Jews. Yet was Judas way disturbed, but encouraging his Army, slew hundred of the Forlorn Hope; Eleazer the Bro of Judas, seeing a huge Elephant with Royal T pings, and judging that the King was on him, ha with a noble Courage slain those about him, thru Sword into the Belly of the Beast, who suddenly ing, flew him with his Weight.

Judas observing the great Strength of the En marched back to Ferusalem, Antiochus following and taking Bethfura by Treaty for want of h fions, and despairing of Relief, they having King's Oath, that no Violence should be offered yet he thrust them out of the City, and put a rison therein. He lay long before the Temp Jerusalem, the befieged defending it gallantly, they wanted Victuals, the Land not having tilled for feven Years before, whereupon dive cretly fled, and few remained to defend the Te when, by God's Providence, Antiochus had that Philip, his Father's Governour, was comit of Perfia to make himself Lord of his Cou whereupon Antiochus fent an Herald to Juda mising the Jews Peace, and the Libetry of the ligion; which Judas accepting, and taking the Oath for the true Performance thereof, he furre up the Temple to Antiochus, who entering the fal finding it fo impregnable a Place, he, contrary Oath, commanded the Wall, that encompassed be levelled, and fo returned to Antioch with O High prieft, whom, by the Counfel of Lyfiai, to Death, because he had advised his Father vard fi Phil ochus ew h ook Tr vaded eople yfias, em to shed s igh pr ethren iends, o mu my u eneral, marc make ve fuch omifes, Oath ir Cre Time put t obey A famili with h ing all

ight Me

t throu

were

to Den

las : an

State i

orce t

orce the Years to forfake their Religion; a just Revard for fo wicked a Fact.

Philip having conquered much of his Country, Anochus marched against him, fought with him and ew him. Soon after, Demetrius Son of Seleucus, ok Tripolis in Syria, and declaring himself King vaded the Kingdom of Antiochus, to whom the cople generally submitting, seized on Antiochus and yfias, and bringing them to Demetrius, he cauted em to be flain; to this new King divers Jews, bahed for their Impiety, together with Alcimus the igh prieft, reforted, accusing Judas Maccabeus, his ethren, and the rest of the Nation, for killing their jends, and banishing such as were for Demetrius; no much moved with these Reports, sent a great my under Bacchides, a valiant and experienced marching into Judea, sent to Judas, pretending make Peace with him; who observing him to ve such strong Forces, would not trust to his false mifes, though fome of the People did, having Oath for their Protection, but paid dear for ir Credulity, for he flew threescore of them at Time. Then going from Jerujalem, he seized put to Death many Jews, commanding the rest obey Alcimus the High-prieft, who, by his feigned familiar Deportment, drew many wicked Jews to el with him, and then marched through the Country, all ry ing all who were for Judas; who feeing many ight Men thus causlesly killed, he with his Army, t through the Land, and flew all the Apostates were of Alcimus's Faction; he thereupon goto Demetrius made grievous Complaints against as; and shewing how dangerous it would be to State if he went thus on, Demetrius thereupon fent nei

fent an Army against Judas, under Niconon, con manding him not to spare any of the Nations of the udas Nicanor coming to Jerusalem, offered no Ad Nicanor coming to Jerusalem, offered no Ad sighbor Hoffility; but endeavouring to entrap Judas by Sul d kill tilty, fent him a peaceable Message, protesting he d figned no Injury, but came only to express the gor en.

Affections of Demetrius to the Jewish Nation. Ju mis the and his Brethren, deceived with these fair Pretence entertained him and his Army, and Nicanor salon od, be Judas, whilst they were in Discourse he gave a Si havi to his Soldiers to feize him; but Judas discover the Treason, escaped from him, and got to his Arm al Coupon which Nicanor proclaimed open War again hear him, and fought him near Cater Salama, where obtained the Victory, and constrained Judas to treat into the Fortress of Jerusalem, where Nice besieged him awhile and then retired. At wh Time, certain of the Priests and Elders met he Sena and having given him Reverence, they shewed be Con the Sacrifices they intended to offer to God for King's Prosperity. But Demetrius blasphem threatned them, if they did not deliver Judas his Hands, at his Return he would destroy the Tem hereupon the Priests wept abundantly, befeeching to defend the Temple and his true Worshippers the Outrage of their Enemies.

Nicanor coming near Bethoron, received a Supply of Soldiers out of Spria; Judas likewife not far off with about a thousand Mon, yet ex ing his Soldiers to trust in God, and not feat Multitude of their Enemies, he courageously en tring Nicanor, where the Conflict was doubtful, last Judas had the Advantage, killing a great ! ber of his Enemies; Nitanor himself fighting varemaine

d by e Bat

Was

all of died

nans, Allies to gi haffade > again nals, g be Ron s Boula

, with rebar he Dea repor bides: was e with tw Juda ceing th , fo tha

was flain, whereupon his Army fled; and udas speedily purlaing made a great Slaughter; d by sounding a Trumper, gave Notice to the ighbouring Places, the Inhabitants armed themselves d killed those that sled, so that none escaped from Battle though they were at least nine thousand en. After this, the Jews had some Rest: but Alall of the Sanctuary, was fuddenly ftruck by d, became Speechless, and fell to the Ground: having suffered grievous Torments many Days, died miserable; whereupon the People, by geal Consent, chose Judas Maccabens High Priest. o hearing of the great Power and Victories of the Allies and Confederates, and to write to Demato give over his Wars against the Jews. hasfadors coming to Rome, were entertained by Senate, and an Alliance was concluded upon e Conditions That none under the Romans Should against the Jews, nor furnish their Enemies with nals, Ships, nor Silver; That if any made War he Romans the Jews should assist them; That the should neither add nor diminish from this associm , without the general Confent of the Romans; and, g what was thus concluded should continue for ever. S he Death of Nicanor, and the Loss of his Army. g reported to Demetrius, he sent another under bides; who coming into Judea and hearing that vise was encamped at Bethzeth, he marched against ex with twenty thousand Poot, and two thousand fear Judas had not in all above two thousand Men. end ceing the vast Number of their Foes, were much ul, , so that many forsaking the Camp, fled away and . at 1 remained with Judas only eight Hundred Men; and his Enemies pressing so hard on him that he has no Time to re-assemble his Forces, yet he resolve to fight with that small handful, exhorting them behave themselves valiantly; who answering. The of go they were not able to make Head against so great us, to Army, advised him to retire and stand on his Guz tal Me till he had re-inforced himself; Judas replied, a forbid that the Sun should see me turn my Back we mine Enemies; though I die and spend my last Bl in this Battle, yet will I never Blemish my form worthy Actions by an ignominious Flight. And havi again encouraged his Soldiers, he commanded the to use their utmost Courage against the Enemy, wi out any Apprehension of Danger.

Bacchides marshalled his Army in Battalia, causing the Trumpets to found, and his Soldiers make a great Shout, he charged his Enemies: das did the like, and encountered Bacchides, u which there enfued a most bloody Fight, which tinued till Sun-set. Judas perceiving that Bacch and the Flower of his Army fought in the Rig wing, drew his most resolute Soldiers thither, brake in upon them, and forcing them to fly, fued them to Mount Aza; but the left Wing follo Judas, and enclosed him on the back part, so finding himself in much Danger, he, with his lowers, resolved to sell their Lives dearly, and It out to the last. He slew a great Number of Enemies; till at length he was so wearied with ing, that he fell to the Ground, and was there upon which his few remaining Companions be themselves to Flight. Simeon and Jonathan, his there recovered his Body, and buried it at M all the People weeping and making great Lam tion for the Death of fo valiant a Commander, rs he e King felf wi Forty,

tfoeve

d nine Comb carryin t Qualit worthily sloever Virtue hath of great, whatsoever Valour of generous, met in the Person of Judas Macus, to make a marvel of his Life, and give imral Memory to his Name. In the Space of fix is he fulfained the great and prodigious Forces of e Kings of Afra, as you have heard, opposing felf with a little flying Camp, against Armies Forty, Sixty, and an Hundred Thousand Men, h he put into Diforder and Confusion; he ded nine Generals of the Infidels in ranged Bartles Combats, killing some with his own Hands, carrying away their Spoils: fo that of all his Qualities, Valour always held the upper Rank, worthily entitled him to the Name of a Worthy.

Surface without a truet, adopte of some TO THE PROPERTY OF mare only the and don't week

MITA the Great and www. Links Comment of the State of the State of bows o punite Chillian Pamon.

Charles of the correction

ARTHUR King of BRITAIN.

ARTHUR, the Great and worthy British King Glory and Victory to his Realm did bring: He th' Heathen Saxons often overcame, Inducing them to own the Christian Name. He, while he lived, upheld the finking State, And Conquest seem'd upon him still to wait; His Subjects Love he thereby doth attain, And he must chuse one after him to reign. The Pictish King this Choice doth much resent, As if to wrong him of his Rights they meant. Both Kings engage in Fight, where both Kings dy With thousands of their Subjects on each Side.

HE and orthy Pri t to thir roick D ne are d Places, iously, ccessors. After E thty Yes the Con ign of ars befo ded in ndred f the Bloc and t uius, fe and h e, and German Saxon many, ine and , Sea a nces, w in Tin and n ich the oplies t re first had

observ

THE British Writers have related such strange and maculous Actions and Adventures of this orthy Prince, that many intelligent Men have been to think that all which hath been written of his roick Deeds is meer Fiction and Invention; yea, me are of Opinion, that there never was such a son. But the Historians disagree about Times i Places, some writing carelesty, and others superiously, yet they all agree upon the Predecessors and ccessors of this noble King.

After England had for above four Hundred and thty Years been subject to the Romans, which began the Conquest that Julius Cafar made here in the ign of Cassibelan King of the Britains, seventeen ars before the Birth of our Bleffed Saviour; and led in the Time of the Emperor Gratianus, three ndred seventy fix Years after Christ; Vartigern, the Blood Royal of the British Kings, by Usurpaand the Murder of Conftance, the Son of Contius, feized upon the Crown; who growing odiand hateful to his Subjects, both for his wicked e, and ill got Sovereignty, he was forced to fend Germany for the Saxons, to aid and support him ; Saxons at this Time possess'd the third Part of many, holding all the Country between the River ine and Elbe, bounded on the North with the Bal-, Sea and the Ocean, and governed by twelve nces, who elected a Sovereign Leader and Gene-in Time of War; this being so spacious, popu-, and near a Country well furnished with Shipping, ich the Britains wanted, yielded always plentiful plies to the Undertakers of this Action, who e first two Brothers, Hengist and Horsa; after had continued here a while as hired Soldiers, observed the Weakness both of Prince and People, H 3

their Number daily encreased; at first they had on the Isle of Thanet allowed them to inhabit, but for after the whole County of Kent was made on to them, upon Condition they should defend the Land against the Piets and Scots; and in short Tim greater Privileges were granted them upon Vort gern's marrying the Daughter of Hengift, an exceed ing beautiful Lady, who was brought over on Pu pole to fleal away the Heart of that diffolute Prince fo that by this Alliance, and the fruitfulness of h Country, so many of this populous and military N tion came in, that Kent in a little while grew to narrow for them; and Hengist, to extend their Pow into all Parts of the Kingdom, persuaded Vortige to plant a Colony of them in the North beyond Hun ber, to be a continual Guard against all Invasions that Side; which being granted, he fends for Od his Brother, and his Son Ebufa, to manage that D fign; and hereby the Saxons came to possels Kent at Northumberland, which contained all the Country from the River Humber to Scotland.

And now the Servants became Masters, contending their Entertainers, and committing many lefolences; whereupon the British Nobility combit together, and resolve to depose Vortigern, the Author of this inconsiderate Admission of Strangers, and chuse Vortimer his Son in his Stead, a Prince of gre Worth, who, whilst he lived, gave them many her Encounters; but all prevailed not, for the Sambeing possess of the chief Gate of the Land, whill also open to their Country, to receive continual Suplies from thence without any Resistance, had a Advantage to weary them all out at last; and, hide Force, they are said to have used Treaches in murdering three hundred of the British Nobil melbury ce with release vinces n Gener h for not effe th effusio or the ert in 1 d to fo eigners, nce at a Vherein Gallani and Va m none elius An thy Pri of Co worthy up the

> them gs of the ement to having

Son of

ng his 1

to the tho' h

requ

release him, but upon granting them three sinces more; also the long Life of Hengist, a poGeneral, who lived almost forty Years, made the for the settling their Dominion here; which not effected without a great deal of Labour, and the effusion of Blood.

or the Britains being by continual Wars made et in military Discipline, grew at length so end to see their Country ravaged from them by eigners, that they sold their Liberties and Inhe-

ce at a very dear Rate.

Wherein much must be attributed to the Courage Gallantry of their Leaders, from whom the Spiand Valour of a People doth usually proceed; of m none are more worthy to be remembered than dius Ambrofius, the last of the Romans; and our thy Prince Arthur, the noblest of Britains; a of Conduct and Valour almost above a Man, worthy of eternal Memory, who while he stood, up the finking State of his Country. He was Son of Uter Pendragon by the fair Igrene, and ng his Life had continued War with the Saxons, and Scots, who were fometimes Confederate them; in the beginning of his Reign the two ement to the Crown of Britain, but having married the eldest Sister of Aurelius Ambar was begot out of Wedus, and because Arthur was begot out of Wed-U tho' his Mother was after married to Uter they ght it more reasonable the Kingdom should deto their Sifter's Son than to him; whereupon fent ambaffadors to the British Lords and Norequiring. That according to their Number daily encreased; at first they had on the Isle of Thanet allowed them to inhabit, but so after the whole County of Kent was made on to them, upon Condition they should defend t Land against the Piets and Scots; and in short Tim greater Privileges were granted them upon Vor gern's marrying the Daughter of Hengift, an excee ing beautiful Lady, who was brought over on Po pose to steal away the Heart of that dissolute Prince fo that by this Alliance, and the fruitfulness of Country, fo many of this populous and military N tion came in, that Kent in a little while grew t narrow for them ; and Hengist, to extend their Pow into all Parts of the Kingdom, persuaded Vortige to plant a Colony of them in the North beyond Hu ber, to be a continual Guard against all Invasions that Side; which being granted, he fends for O his Brother, and his Son Ebufa, to manage that I fign; and hereby the Saxons came to possess Kent a Northumberland, which contained all the Count from the River Humber to Scotland.

And now the Servants became Masters, contening their Entertainers, and committing many solutions; whereupon the British Nobility comb together, and resolve to depose Vortigern, the Author of this inconsiderate Admission of Strangers, and chuse Vortimer his Son in his Stead, a Prince of gr Worth, who, whilst he lived, gave them many he Encounters; but all prevailed not, for the Sax being possess of the chief Gate of the Land, whe lay open to their Country, to receive continual Splies from thence without any Resistance, had Advantage to weary them all out at last; and, side Force, they are said to have used Treaches in murdering three hundred of the British Nobil ce with releale vinces m Genera for t not effe h effusio or the rt in n d to fee igners, ce at a herein Gallanti nd Val m none lius Am hy Prin of Co worthy up the on of g his Li and S them ;

> tho' hi he it m to the fent ar s of the

ment to having

requi

afoury (where they innocently met to treat of a e with 'em) took their King Prisoner, and would release him, but upon granting them three inces more; also the long Life of Hengist, a po-General, who lived almost forty Years, made h for the fettling their Dominion here; which not effected without a great deal of Labour, and heffusion of Blood.

or the Britains being by continual Wars made nt in military Discipline, grew at length so end to fee their Country ravaged from them by igners, that they fold their Liberties and Inhe-

ce at a very dear Rate.

herein much must be attributed to the Courage Gallantry of their Leaders, from whom the Spind Valour of a People doth usually proceed; of m none are more worthy to be remembered than hus Ambrosius, the last of the Romans; and our hy Prince Arthur, the noblest of Britains; a of Conduct and Valour almost above a Man, worthy of eternal Memory, who while he flood, up the finking State of his Country. He was son of Uter Pendragon by the fair Igrene, and g his Life had continued War with the Saxons, and Scots, who were sometimes Consederate them; in the beginning of his Reign the two s of these two Nations seemed to envy his Adment to the Crown of Britain; Loth King of the having married the eldest Sister of Aurelius Amhaving married the eldest Sister of Aurelius Am-, and because Arthur was begot out of Wedtho' his Mother was after married to Uter they ht it more reasonable the Kingdom should dehe to their Sifter's Son than to him; whereupon fent ambaffadors to the British Lords and Nobi requiring. That according to the ancient

Laws and Customs of this Realm, they should rece him as King, who had married the Sifter and H of the two Brethren, Ambrofius and Uter, their Kings. The Britains received this Message great Scorn, disdaining to think of submitting t Stranger; and dispatching the Ambassadors many Reproaches against Loth and the Piets, t proclaimed Arthur King of the Realm, who rai a potent Army, marched inflantly against the Sax hoping to engage them before the Pias should which doubtless they would do suddenly; has therefore procured more Aid from Amorica, or Britain in France, they met with the Saxons wi ten Miles of London, whom they vanquish'd in fet Battles, and obliged them to pay Tribute, and ceive such Governors over them as Arthur should point, with several other very hard Conditions the great Rejoicings of the Britains for such pro rous and happy Success under their new King.

After this the Britains easily took London, was Arthur continued for some Time in Consults with his Nobility and Commanders how they she proceed in their Wars against the rest of the Sax having at length prepared a mighty Army, An resolved to go against those beyond Humber in North, with whom the PiEts had concluded a Lea whereby they were obliged to assist against their mon Enemies the Britains. Arthur marching Torksbire encamped near the Enemy, who were ready joined together, and resolving to fight the Day; he appointed Howel Commander of the Britains, to engage the PiEts, while himself with the Saxons; the Battle was very surious, for some time the Victory was doubtful, but at least the saxons in the Battle was very surious, for some time the Victory was doubtful, but at least the saxons is the Battle was very surious, for some time the Victory was doubtful, but at least the saxons is the Battle was very surious, for some time the Victory was doubtful, but at least the saxons is the Battle was very surious, for some time the Victory was doubtful, but at least the saxons is the Battle was very surious, for some time the Victory was doubtful, but at least the saxons is the Battle was very surious, some saxons and saxons are surious.

lies up mendered ar Relimany in fresh Saxons the Br

Piets !

ge, and drthur ging it ring ho t by lyin went i m the ming mugern and ming out British on Arthu

th got
o living:
in fome aking or my; Ari

Pias were put to Flight; which the Saxons perone Force of the Britains, they likewise left the d, and fled with all Speed toward York. Arthur fuing them, befieged that City almost three Months, Saxons 'valiantly defending it, and making brifk les upon the Besiegers; but at length Provisions ming very scarce, they were just ready to have rendered, when Notice was given them, that a ng Army of Pies and Saxons were coming to r Relief, together with Occa, who escaped into fresh Forces in the River Humber; whereupon Saxons refused to treat any further, not doubting the Britains would be quickly forced to raise the ge, and be glad to get off with their own Lives. Arthur having intelligence of those Succours, and ging it no Wisdom to stay for their coming, conby lying so long in the Field, raised his Siege, went into Wales, where leaving the French Brito quarter that Winter, he with his choice oops marched to London to prevent any Disturbance m the Kentish Saxons, or others. In the Spring ing mustered his Forces, he proceeded against gern and Occa, the two Saxon Generals, who ming out of Northumberland, wasted and destroyed British Borders with their usual Cruelty; whereon Arthur encountering them twice in Battle, overme in both; and then again besieging York, he at 5th got Possession thereof by means of a Britain, o living among the Saxons within the City privately in some Britains in the dead of the Night, who aking open the Gates, gave Entrance to the whole my; Arthur would not fuffer many of the Saxons to be flain, but pardoned all who begged Quan thereby to gain a Reputation of Clemency amo his Adversaries. The Britains having thus gotten To many Skirmines happened between them and the Sa on; thereabout; but Winter coming on, they ga up themselves to drinking, banqueting, and other luptuous Pleasures, so that when they marched in the Field next Summer, they were unable to ende the Labours and Fatigues of War, and for feve

Years performed very little Service.

At length Aribur concluded a League with La King of Piets, whereby it was agreed, That Arthu during his Life should be King of Britain; and af his Decease, the Kingdom should descend to Mordre the eldest Son of Loth, and his Heirs; That the Pi should at all Times affift the Britains against the Saxon and should freely possess all such Lands as they recover from them beyond the River Humber; That they show duly observe the League that was made between the and the Scots; That Mordred should marry the Day ter of Gowlan a nable Britain, and next to Arth bimself; That the Children of this Marriage show be brought up by their Grand-father in Britain, they came to Years of Discretion : That Gawan, Brother of Mordred, Should serve King Arthur in Wars, for which he should receive large Possessions Arthur having concluded this Leag and being defirous to purge this Island of the He thenish Saxons, he sent to the Kings of Scotland, Pictland, requiring them, That for the Advancem of Christ's Religion, which they professed and owns they should forthwith affemble their Forces, and m bim at Tynmouth at a Day appointed, that fo the might join together and march against their comm deritoo eneral, oaching d rid ere he their d them to Judg Falsh es aga

les.

nted to ays m arched:

The Pi Stand e, fo th ving, c re imi Scots in nt Saxon e; Co ng Loth t at the instant e of Co b foon Men w ay ; Ar was no a, that dly esca oght to ped int ed, the

THE SEVERESTERN STREET,

and to this so reasonable a Request, and in a few ays meeting with the Britains, they presently arched all together against the Saxons, whom they derstood were already in the Field under Occa their eneral, ready to receive them. Both Armies appaching each other, Colgern Duke of Northumbered rid up to the very Front of the Picts Army, here he severely reproached Loth and his Nobility their Breach of Friendship with the Saxons, and d them he did not doubt but suddenly to see some if Judgment fall upon them for their Treachery of Falshood, in thus joining with their former Eners against their most trusty Friends and constant lies.

The Pittilb King being moved hereat, commanded Standards to advance; neither were the Saxons e, fo that the Skirmish began; which Arthur perving, commanded the Britains to engage, fo that re immediately followed a terrible Slaughter; Scots in the Right Wing killing Childrick, an Emito Saxon Captain, quickly discomfitted them on that it; Colgern earnestly desiring to be revenged of t at the first Encounter he threw him to the Ground; instantly two Pictiffs Horsemen coming on one e of Colgern, ran him quite through the Body; b soon recovered himself, but Colgern being dead, Men were so disheartened, that they presently ran ay; Arthur perceiving the main Battle of the Saxwas now left naked, pressed on so violently upon a, that having received a desperate Wound, he ught to the Sea-fide, he got into a Ship, and ped into Germany. This Victory being thus obdly escaped out of the Battle; but being at length ed, the Saxons were forced- to submit themselves to King Arthur, who offered them Pardon as to I and Goods, if they would turn Christians, and ver hereafter engage against their Neighbours Britains, Scots and Piets; which if they would confent to, he commanded them, that leaving the Arms and Goods behind, they should, upon Pain Death, depart the Kingdom within fourteen De Hereupon many Saxons went over to Germany; oth pretending to be Christians still remained, hoping better Fortune. Several who continued after Time appointed, and refused to be baptized, v put to Death according to the Proclamation, fo very few were thought to profess the Christian F fincerely,

All Things thus quieted in Northumberland, thur repaired several Churches in York and o Places, which had been ruined and defaced by barbarous Infidels. Next Year he had Notice, Saxons who inhabited the Isle of Wight, joining those in Kent, had fallen upon the Britains on Side the Thames, killing and destroying a great Num of them; whereat being much moved, he halted ward London with his Forces, resolving utterly to out the East and South Saxons, fince his Subj could never be fecure fo long as that wicked G ration remained amongst them. In Pursuance of League, he had twenty thousand Piets and Scots in Expedition; Eugenius Nephew to King Congal, Mordred Son of King Loth, being their Gene Then marching forward, he encamped in the near the Thomes, and himself with some of his bility going to London, caused Prayers to be made Almighty God three Days together for their G Success against the Saxons; on the fourth Day vine Service being celebrated by the Bishop of

and a mmitte d Proce the Ci ourage, minft Pa hritian' Mordre. in the me wit ne Am proces ere willing bitance reafter, r would ys, wh the we that if the mea as, wha Britai ladors 1 their C ces of reat N hortatio fmall a ir Enen were

teft of p of f

rt, tho

ht and

in, and a Sermon preached in the Market place, he ommitted himself and his whole Army to the Tuition of Protection of Jesus Christ, and then issuing out the City, he exhorted his Soldiers to be of good burage, fince they were to fight a just Quarrel and Pagans, and the implacable Enemies of the histian Faith.

Mordred, and Gowolan his Father-in law, marchin the Front with five thouland Horle; and being me within five Miles of the Saxons Camp, there me Ambassadors to King Arthur desiring him not proceed any further, fince if he pleafed they se willing to depart the Land with their Goods and bitance without further molelling the Britains ever reafter, but Arthur would not consent hereto, neiwould so much as allow them a Truce for three ys, which they earnestly defired; only he told him. the would not march above two Miles that Day, that if they came again next Morning, he would the mean Time confult with his Nobility and Capas, what Answer to give to their Request. Whilst Britains were busied about the News these Amladors brought, the Saxons suddenly marching out their Camp, fell with much Violence upon the res of Mordred and Gowolan, of whom they killed reat Number in that Surprize; though by their hortations, their Men made the utmost Refistance small a Company could against the Multitude of ir Enemies, by whom at length being oppress'd were forced to fly, not resting till they came to rest of the Army; Mordred and Gowolan, by the it, tho many of the Followers were killed in the ht and Chafe.

The Saxon Ambassadors being not yet gone out the Camp, were hereupon fecured till the next A.o. ing, and then fent back with this Answer; That Britains were relokved for the future never to the with any Messengers from the Saxons about Pea fince it is apparent they defigned nothing but Treath and Fallbood, baving contrary to the Laws of Ar unworthily hallen upon the British Forces, whilf the Embassadors pretended to make an accommodation; il therefore they Should expect nothing from Arthur but utmost Revenge, and the most cruel Severities of W in recompence of their wicked Infidelity. They h no fooner received this Answer but Forty other the principal Saxons arrived, who endeavoured to cuse what had happened over, Night, laying all Blame upon some few rash heady Fellows who ka nothing of the Commanders of the Army, nor their lending Ambailadors to them.

But Arthur Suspecting this to be another Subtil To of the Saxons, commanded these Messengers as as the former to be secured in the Marshal's Te whilft he himself in the second Watch of the Ni marched privately against the Enemy, dividing his my into three Parts; and having gone about it Miles, they fell upon the Saxons Out Guards ere t were aware, which caused such a Tumult and C fusion amongst them, one calling and crying out a another, that the most valiant among them were mayed. Mordred defirous to revenge his last O throw, fell in hercely among them; but some has by this Time armed themselves, made Resistance, fended themselves amidst the Carts and Carria and thereby for a while stopt the Violence of Britains; others unable to refift, broke out of Camp and fled; but being purfued by the Br Horse a great number perish'd in the next Ri at a eld ut afte thur h the I wou reft c nd, pr vearly ited h te and lible R Prefe t is w ing th n, he f lible to rmishe Slaugh ces are Gleyn ; er Dang feventh fing c

their !

arter.

tenth by elevent twelfth Whilft el w King umber,

Caffle

enth of

hu

fing drowning rather than to fall into the Hands their mercilels Adversaries, who that Day gave no arter. It was thought this bloody Battle, and fo at a Slaughter of fuch a Multitude of Samens, eld utterly have disabled them that they should beafter have been troublefome to the Britains. ther having thus vanquished his Enemies, dismit the Ambassadors in his Camp, upon Condition would return back to Germany ; but he suffered reft of the meaner Saxons to remain fill in the nd. provided they would turn Christians, and pay yearly Fribute m. The Scatt and Piets who had hed him in this War, he streated with much te and Magnificence at London, giving them all ible Respect and Flonour, and dismussing them with Prefents, and Princely Rewards . bounds when the the Saxon with his own Sword, named Calling, he flew above eight hundred of them, if it be lible to be true. In twelve fen Battles, belides milhes, he is faid to have returned Victor from Slaughter of the Sanon: The Names of which ces are faid to be, the first at the Mouth of the Rices are faid to be, the first at the Mouth of the Rices are faid to be, the first at the Mouth of the Rices are faid to be, the first at the Mouth of the Rices are faid to be, the first at the Mouth of the Rices are faid to be, the first at the Mouth of the Rices are faid to be, the first at the Mouth of the Rices are faid to be, the first at the Mouth of the Rices are faid to be, the first at the Mouth of the Rices are faid to be, the first at the Mouth of the Rices are faid to be the first at the River Basse; seventh, in the Wood Calidon; the eighth, near Castle of Gainien; the ninth at Canalin in Wale; tenth by the Sea side, in a Place called Richard; the side of Bathen Hill.

Whilst these Things were acted in Britain, Conis King of Scotland, was murdered in his Bedamber, by the Treason of Donald, Governor of ol, in the twentieth Year of his Reign, and the tenth of Arthur's Dominion over Britain: after om succeeded Eugenius his Nephew, About this Time some Authors ascribe to Arthur the obtain of many glorious Victories against the brish, December Norwegians, and other northern Nations; yea, fem bein affirm that he subdued most part of Germany, the Gowi affirm that he fubdued most part of Germany, the Countries, Normandy, France, the Romans, and hights of People of the East, the Credit whereof feems doubtful; only it is certain (as Hector Boetius affir that Arthur lived in the Days of Justinian the I peror, about which Time the Goths, Vandals, gonians, and French, invaded and ruined divers ? of the Roman Empire; yet we find no mention King Arthur acting any Thing among them.

I e

Time

But notwithstanding his wonderful Atchieveme of the it is related, Lucius Hiberius the Roman Legate ace and manded of him a Tribute for Britain; which he not only denied, but also threatened to have a Tril from Rome, as appears by his Letters fent to the dred h nate to this Purpose; Understand you of Rome, the too Fo am King Arthur of Britain' and freely it bold, and a address bold, and at Rome bastily will I be, not to give r, they Truage (or Tribute) but to require Truage of you, nomina Constantine who was Helen's Son, and others of in them Ancestors conquered Rome, and thereof were his to convers; and what they had I hope to recover by Golutely Grace; and accordingly (faith the Story) he fet in to fir ward against Lucius Hiberius, who with great Po om for and vain Confidence came marching against be willing where after a long and bloody fight the Romans of promidifcomfitted, their General killed, and this flain Be Nobil fent to the Senate for a Tribute from Britain. In great

King Arthur, to increase the Courage of his the S diers, is said to have instituted the Order of as and Knights of the Round Sable, to which none were sail pr mitted but such of the Nobility as were most reno Peers of ed for Virtue and Courage; they were in all present r's Va ght hav hings a ght Cre ethe qu more ce After t n begar b King imber of one Hundred and Fifty, the chiefest of im being Sir Lancelot, Sir Tristram. Sir Lamlock, Gowin, and others. They were all recorded for hights of great Renown; and had not King Aring's Valour been most transcendent, each of them that have passed for no less than a Worthy. These hings are related of him; of which the Reader the questionable Matters, let us proceed to what more certain.

Num pice; ai

After the Britains were delivered from the Terof the Saxons, and had for fome Time enjoyed ce and Quietness, they grew rich, wealthy, and began to repent of the League they made with King of the Pills, whereby it was agreed that dred his Son should sacceed, they now resolving no Foreigner should reign over them, and there-, they humbly befeech him, fince he had no Sons nominate a Successor of their own Nation to gon them after his Decease; Arthur finding it in to contradict this their Refolution, fince they fo olutely refused to be ruled by a Stranger, advised m to find out one of the Blood-Royal themselves, om for his Wisdom, Valour, and Nobility, they willing should reign over them, and he for his t promised to ratify and confirm their Election. Be Nobility and Commons thereupon met together h great Joy, and at length agreed upon Confian-the Son of Cadon, Duke of Cornwall, a viras and comely young Gentleman, and endued Peers of the Realm into the Council-Chamber, presented to Arthur, he gladly accepted their ice; and forthwith caused Constantine to be proclaimed of Prince of Britain; who being thus preferred, b ings. haved himself with that Discretion and Gallant Ans that the Britains entertained a very high Opinion dignati his Worth and future Government

Mean Time Loth King of the Picts decease woured Mordered his Son foon succeeded him who hearding A that Constantine was proclaimed Prince, was me readily diffushed, and fent Ambaffadors to Arthur to cost fome plain, That contrary to the Honour of a King, eved by proclaiming Continue his Heir, had broken in the League between himself and his Father, and end ansaction woured to defeat him of his rightful Inheritan lift feed defiring him not so easily to consent to the Per to profess of the Britains, as thereby to violate the Luid atte both of God and Man; and admonishing him yet Army observe the League which he had so solemnly it ks, who to, and to persuade his Subjects to do the less for left they thould provoke the Wrath of Almie Scots ar God against them, who is a just Revenger of m, and Breach of all Oaths. Leagues, and Covenants e each this the Nobles of Britain answered, That to Natio League concluded between Arthur and Loth en hade the but for their Lives, and was determined upon to what Death of either of them, and therefore Arthur the Lo done nothing but according to the Duty of a Prewell be who tendered the Peace and Huppiness of his Sub terment in promiding one of their own Nation to Success on, the thereby to prevent the Realm from falling into by wes Hands of Strangens which they could by no by for the Suffer. Therefore if the Picts loved their Wealth Sordred Security, it would be good for them to be cont est Exh with their own Bounds and Dominion; fince if ferent I Bould attempt to gain other Men's Estate and To is, upon ries, they would be forced in a short Time to sa should mi/sbi

ge the ibievous Consequences of juch ill advised Underings. The Embassadors of Pittland returning with Answer, the whole Nation were fo ftirr'd with ignation, that they resolved immediately to rege their Wrongs by open War; but first they envoured to procure the Scots to affift them, and ding Ambassadors to Eugenius then King of Scotland, readily agreed to their Requests, upon pretence fome of the Scoteb Rebels who fled to Arthur were eved by him, and likewise suffered to make Ininto Scotland. Arthur having notice of thefe infactions, and War being proclaimed against him, fift fecured the Sea Coast with considerable Forto prevent the landing of the Saxons, if they ld attempt it; and then marched with the reft of Army, as far as the River Humber, near the ks, whereof he pitch'd his Tents (a Place formerly for the Overthrow of the Britain 1 expecting Scots and Piets, who in a fhort Time came up to. n, and both Armies were in Sight ready to ene each other, when certain Bishops, of all the e Nations riding to and fro, took great Pains tol hade the Kings to Peace and Concord, especially what they were going to try with the Sword, the Lofs of much Blood, and many Lives, might well be composed by an amicable and friendly cement; neither could they better gratify the m, the common Enemies to the Christian Religion, by weakning and destroying each other, to make lerdred and Eugenius were induced by these at the Exhortations to refer the Differences to some ferent Persons, and presently to lay down their is, upon Assurance that the League with King should be faithfully observed. Arthur was also content for his Part to have agreed thereto; but i other Britains especially the Kindred and Allies Conftantine, utterly refused it, and prive divers reproact ful Words to the Bishops for their unreasonable into poling, fince they were already ranged in Battle, that it might be doubted they defigned to betray the Army to their Enemies, under pretence of an unpr fitable Agreement, After this, both Parties engage with great Fury; but the Britains had fuch Dife vantage by the Place where they flood, which full of Mire, Bogs, and Mosses, that they con neither advantageously defend themselves, nor offer their Enemies; yet the Battle continued a lo Time with the Slaughter of fo many Men, that t River Humber, near which it was fought, grew with Blood, and carried a Multitude of dead Bod into the Sea. In the Heat of the Fight a subtil & cried out with a loud Voice in the British Tongue, Arthur, and most of his Nobility were slain, and was therefore in vain to refult any longer, or he for victory, but better for every Man to thift himself, and endeavour to make his Escape,

The News wonderfully encouraged the Scots a Picts; but the Britains were so much astonished at that the greatest Part instantly sled away; oth judging it only a crasty Device to discourage the continued to make the utmost Resistance, till to were over-powered, and almost every Man sa This Victory was very hardly got, and cost much Lives than any other for many Years before; for the Scots and Picts, who won the Field, there we killed above twenty thousand, together with Mordred, and abundance of the Nobility of Mations; of the Britains and their Confederates, the Fight and Pursuit, above thirty Thousand amon ther to for hi rageou ther M Nobil mp was miver, other L s, tho eemed ght in he Reig Pias, over th ny ftra rbs in nelon a her; in the second other, e.

The Boursenbury

an E

Sun fe

was fu

o being many at Brita ied, fi

Enemied the

with

among them King Arthur himself, and Gogwan ther to Mordred, who had fuch an intire Affecfor his Lord and Mafter Arthur, that he fought rageously on his Side that Day against his own ther Mordred, Gowan and most Part of the Bri-Nobility were likewise slain. Next Day the mp was plundered and among other rich Spoils, niver, King Antbur's Wife, with a great Number other Ladies and Gentlewomen, were taken Prisos, though the and fome others were afterwards eemed upon Ransom. This bloody Battle was ght in the Year of our Lord 542, the 26th Year he Reign of King Arthur, and so much weakened Pills, and Scots, and Britains, that they could not over their Losses in many Years. The same Year ny strange Prodigies were seen; the Grass and rbs in Yorksbire were stained with Blood; at Great relon a Cow brought forth a Calf with two Heads; an Ewe brought forth a Lamb of both Sexes; Sun for several Days appeared like Blood; the was full of bright Stars at noon, divers Days toher; in Wales, there was a Battle between the ws and Magpies on one Side, and the Ravens on other, and great Slaughter was made on each

The Body of this famous Worthy was buried at Jenbury in Somerfetsbire, in the Church Yard, and covered in the Reign of King Henry the Second, being informed by a Welch Ministrel, that could many Histories in Welch, of the Acts of the anat Britains, declared that Arthur's Body was there ied, fixteen Foot deep, between two Pillars, lest Enemies the Saxons fhould have found him. Henry led the Place to be dug up; after they had digged ut feven Foot, they found a mighty broad Stone 1.5 with a leaden Crofs fastened to that part which downward, with this Infcription, Hic jacet fetal inclutes Rex Arthurus in Infula Avalonia: Here l the renoumed King Arthur, in the Isle of Avalo His Body was enclosed in a great Tree made holl which being opened, his Bones appeared of a great Bigness, his Shin-bone reached about the K of a very tall Man, his Skull was fo large that Place between his Eyes was a Span broad, in wh appeared fome Signs of Wounds and Bruiles; Body of his Wife Guniver was likewife buried him, the Hair of her Head was curiously plaited, thined like burnish'd Gold, but being touch'd flantly fell to Duft, The Abbot who by the Kin Command fearched for the Grave, removed both Bones to the Great Church, and there buried them a fair double Tomb of Marble laying the Body the King at the Head thereof, and the Queen's at Feet, above fix hundred Years after they were buried, and in the Year of our Lord 1191. Il conclude the Life of this worthy Prince with an E taph written in Memory of him by John Lelan Monk, in Latin, and translated into English, ma Years fince, by Nigholas Rofrock, which you have the Poetry of these Times.

omist sing-to what Saxonicas toties qui fudit Marte cruento Turmas, & peperit spalis fibi nomen opinis, &c.

chand brand which a burney water cook used

Who vanguished the Saxon Troops - Children With Battles bloody Broils And purchas'd to himself a Name, With Warlike wealthy Spoils. We the Place to be down on a for the ball dip col 90000 ho wit The P nd an u On Ne

ho Fre The G With fl

ho of t at hom That b ere life

Within

mous f And 'g bose glo Throug nd who

> Doth n herefore Of Bri ever for Of thri

a let hearteful naise

t place Your R hole fr

Your I

the with his shivering shining Sword The Piess so oft diffnay'd, and an unweildly servile Yoke, On Necks of Scots had laid.

ho Frenchmen puft with Pride, and who The Germans fierce in light, from tool; and beat the Danes With flyong and marrial Might.

ho of that murdering Morared sid The vital Breath expel, at honrid cruel Montter great, That bloody Tyrant fell.

me lifeless Arthur lies intomb'd Within this stately Hearse; mous for Strength and Chivalry, And 'gainst his Enemies sierce.

bose glorious Acts and Victories Through all the World do fly, all whose most worthy Fame and Name Doth reach the very Sky.

of British Line and Race, wer forget your Emperor Great,
Of thrice renowned Grace:

Your Rosy Garlands gay, hose fragrant Smell may witness well Your Duties you display.

CHARLES the GREAT

TE well defero'd the Name of Charlemagne, Who all his Enemies having overcome, de de of Was own'd and crown'd Great Emperor of Rome; Tafion to Virtue and Valour be fill mixt fo well, Virtue and Valour be still mixt so well, we Race Twas bard to say in which be did excell. The Christian Faith be always did defend, and against Saracens did oft contend. I have some The Huns and Pagans too be conquered ; I vio A wo His Name alone fill'd them with Fear and Dread, et all bis Fury be'd laid by, if they Yould Idals leave, and the true God obey.

HE : Orig , was ul, nov Roman emies t y got heir Ca doing

Pb this G lign; vis add decesso Nativ riftians m then fts, ur w to th ion th red in ceffivel about gs (as > he F 22d]

dom and S n the wks i

HE ancient French Historians relate that the Original Habitation of this now potent Nan, was in that part of Germany which lay nearest d, now called France; and having together with Romans obtained a great Victory against the Alans, mies to the Empire in the Reign of Valentinian, y got Possession of a great part of Gaul as a Fruit their Conquest, which they held by their Sword, doing any Homage for it but to their own Va-. Pharamond laid the first Stone in the Building this Great Monarchy; Clodien profecuted this ign; Merouse made it appear above Ground; ous adding the Profession of Christ to his own and decessors Valour, so won the Hearts of the Gauls Natives of this Country, who were generally riftians, that he procured voluntary Obedience m them, and an affured Poffession of his new Confts, uniting both Nations into one, and giving w to the Conquered with fuch Wisdom and Difion that the Name of France was generally reed in Gaul. The Race of Pharamond continued effively in France during the Reign of 21 Kings, about 126 Years, at which time, 9 or 10 idle gs (as French History calls them) succeeding each r, the Kingdom was thereby reduced to a Mulde of Dangers and Inconveniences, which gave asson to Charles Martel to lay the Foundation of w Race of Kings from his own Posterity, who g first Governour of the Palace, was chosen Prince the French; and upon this Account is reckoned 22d King of France: he was a Man of great dom and Courage, and managed all Affairs of and State during the Reign of the three last Kings. the Time of Thierry the Second, the Saracens who issuing out of Asia into Africa and Spain, posses possest themselves of many mighty Kingdoms and re Ki Provinces under the Command of Abderamen the Wi King, and afterward invaded France with an Arm Christian of four Hundred thousand Men; but by the admirench rable Conduct of Martel, this vast Multitude was up the terly vanquished, three hundred seventy sive thousand scious Barbarians being slain in the Field, and their Kinds and found dead in a Heap of Carcasses, not wounder as his but smothered by the Multitude that sled; the Frenchey his lost sifteen hundred, and among them many of the es per Nobility and Gentry. The Care and Toil of greens we Affairs together with his Age, having much broke bolute Martel; and the Weakness of Childerick, the left them King of the first Race, giving him Encourage for parment, he resolves so to dispose of Things as to leas to the the Kingdom to his Children, and therefore of fpenfect ferving that Childerick loved no man, neither and him and him; and that Pepin his own Son, was below to Bish of all, both for his own and Martel's Sake as the fent S Protector of their Liberry, whereas Childerick of the V not regard the Common Good, but spent his Time Intermed Folly and Voluptuousness; Martel therefore at loss of the Real of Pepin, who wed who he knew to be stout and of a great Spirit. After institute the Real of Pepin proclaimed his Marten institute in all Places; but Religion, and the Reverence and all his Devotion the French Nation naturally bear to Kin Being in seemed to be insuperable Difficulties to his Advantage of the Crown of Childreich had already reign at the Real of the Crown of Childreich had already reign at the Real of the Crown of Childreich had already reign at the Real of the Crown of Childreich had already reign at the Real of the Crown of Childreich had already reign at the Real of the Real ment to the Crown; Childerick had already reignat to a Nine Years, only in Appearance, under Martel, is apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags, Childerick had already reignat to a supparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags, Childerick had already reignated as apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags, Childerick had already reignated as apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags, Childerick had already reignated at the gap apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags, Childerick had already reignated at the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags, Childerick had already reignated at the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags, Childerick had already reignated at the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags, Childerick had already reignated at the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags, Childerick had already reignated at the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags, Childerick had already reignated at the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags, Childerick had already reignated at the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags, Childerick had already reignated at the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags apparatour more under Pepin, who to remove the lags apparatour more under Pepin, and lags apparatour more under pepin apparatour more under pepin apparatour more under p maintain a religious, just, merciful, diligent, and cession we King, able to withfland their Enemies, to punish e Wicked, to defend the Good, and protect the hriftian Law, according to the express Words, the rench Kings are fworn to their Coronation Oath; by then should they think themselves bound to a cious King, who was negligent and careless of him-If and his Subjects, fince the contract between them' as limited, and the French were only obliged to bey him, who being endued with many Royal Virons were plain, and eafily received by an biolutely necessary for the common Good; the most of them who seemed thus convinced, had an Eye to have the favour of Pepin. is them who teemed thus convinced, had an Eye to get particular Advantage by the Favour of Pepin. It is to the Scruple of Religion, how they could be spenied from their Oath of Allegiance, Pepin affuring himself of good Friends at Rome, sends thither to Bishops to Pope Zachary, to represent to him the telent State of France; who being truly informed the Weakness of Childerick, who was hated and the Weakness of Childerick, who was hated and of the French to receive Pepin; but chiefly of the French to receive Pepin; but chiefly be oved with Hopes of great Affiftance from him ainfl the Lombards his capital Enemies; he discharged the French from their Oath of Obedience to Childerick, a dall his Race.

The Being thus freed from their Allegiance, they afan abled the general Effates, where it was concluded,

Being thus freed from their Allegiance, they afme abled the general Estates, where it was concluded, at to avoid that Confusion in the Realm, which apparently grown by the Negligence of former ags, Childerick should be rejected, and Pepin chothe one unworthy to reign by reason of his kies, and the other most worthy to be a King for many Royal Virtues; but less the Fundamental Law of and cession should be directly infringed and broken, they

they derive the Race of Pepin from Clovis, the greatity. King of France, to whom he was acknowledged ne Heir, both by Succession and Virtue. The Assemble dories hereupon commanded Boniface, Archbishop of Ment ge, a to declare to Pepin, 'That in Regard of his Virtue atever and their future Hope of his worthy Government, ha the French had, by a free and generous Consent, elemgues ted him King. And in profecution of this Decre ticks, Pepin was instantly Crowned by the said Archbishop; a Compation of the being raised upon a Target or Shield he was carried about the Assembly, according to an antient Ceremony the French; and by Virtue of the same Decree, Children was deposed as unworthy of the Crown, and assemble wards degraded, shaven, and confined to a Monaster there to pass the Remainder of his Days. This Pep h Repusalled the Short, the Twenty third King of France he called the Short, the Twenty third King of France he called the Short, the Twenty third King of France he called the Short, the Twenty third King of France he called the Short, the Twenty third King of France he called the Short, the Twenty third King of France he called the Short, the Twenty third King of France he called the Short the Twenty third King of France he called the Short the Company that the called the Short the Twenty third King of France he called the Short the Company that the called the ca called the Short, the Twenty third King of France, he tat, being reigned eighteen Years with much Glory and the ingreat Love and Affection of his Subjects (the strong sonage Foundation upon which a Prince can build his Aud a clear rity) died in the Year 768.

After his Death, the Estates of France being lible to sembled, concluded to divide the Realm between two Sons, Charles or Carolemagne, the Elder, ate, that Caroleman the younger, Charles being crowned Men, Worms, and Caroleman at Soiffons. Writers have a Father fet down the Bounds of their Dominions, fince thereis A. Years after their Father's Death the whole Kingde to ha Years after their Father's Death the whole Kingd came to Charles; Brothers they were of differ we the Humours, who by Equality of Power, endange ous Na the Ruin of the Monarchy, had not divine Pro Carolon dence united it in the Person of this great Price tatness, Charles; he was endued with excellent Gifts, be below of Body and Mind, of a virtuous Conversation, a seasour above all carefully educated in the Christian Religions, who for which he had much Reverence all his Life. C eatre for mity, Temperance, Equity and Justice, in relieving People, Fidelity to all, and Modefly in using fories, were the admirable Effects of his Knowge, and as remarkable in him as in any Prince atever; he naturally loved Learning and learned n, having been instructed in the Greek and Latin ngues, and likewife in Philosophy and the Mathe-Companions of his Sword, wherewith he often erted himself. He took delight in Poetry, as some his Writings witness; but especially in Histories, erein he was exceeding well read; in Arms his her Pepin was his School Master, under whom he great Commands, which he discharged with Reputation, that he well deserved the Name of the both for his Valour and Virtue; there appeared in his Countenance a grave sweet Majesty; in fonage he was tall, ftrong, and patient of Labour; a clear Spirit, a found Apprehension, Memory and Ignient, which never failed him in Difficulties; ible to some, and pleasing to others, according to Occasion; those Virtues gained him so much Rete, that he was beloved, respected, and obeyed of Men, and having received a great Kingdom from Father, he enlarged it with wonderful Success; th orles Martel, Pepin, and this great Charles feem-de to have been raised up after each other to pre-te the Christian Name amidst the Deluge of bar-ous Nations and the Ruin of the Roman Empire. Caroloman was exceeding jealous of his Brother's ri catness, whom with grief he saw honour'd, obey'd, beloved by all the French, which caused him to cavour as much as possible to countermine his Degives, who had his Eye upon Italy, as the most proper catre for his Valour; for after the death of Pepin, the

Occas

the Church of Rome fell into great Confusions, by the four Practices of Didier King of Lombardy, who have aus Was corrupted some of the Clergy, caused Constant Though Brother to the Duke of Nepezo (his Creature a wa of trusty Friend) to be chosen Pope, and Phillipieus, Practic ready elected, to be violently deposed; the of the Fr. Party resolving not to be imposed on by Didier, vieges, common Confent chuse Stephen the Third, a Sieili pselves to the Popedom, who refolves to call the King me; H. twelves Prelates to Rome, to strengthen his Party, wheing a unanimously confirm the Election of Stephen, and out his pose Confiantine, raised by Force and Disorde Cred though Distar resolved not to be controused, yet case, if ningly diffembling his Thoughts, he sends to cong are ag tulate the Election of Stephen, and renounces & me's T flantine, and pretending to desire the Continuance he open Friendship, proposes to come to Rome, and con an mig with him in private. The Pope, who only may push of the Rrench for Necessity, was easily persual r's secreby Didien to consent thereto, who coming, maked few many Protestations of Obedience. Paul Ephiale untry a perot, whom Didier to corrupted, that having contry, Execution of Justice in his Hands, he causes him end, to seize upon Christopher and Sergias, the Pope's to into a Secretaries, in the Presence of Stephen, whom accuss the of supposed Crimes, he infamously hanged, the whom great offence being for favouring the French, yes ty, and proceeded to banish all the Citizens of Rome, we reby en were noted to be of the French Faction, resolving be Master of Rome in spight of the Pope. Supposed to Charles of the Falshood of the Lombards, sties ag Devote the Charles of the Falshood of the Lombards, sties ag Devote the Charles of the Falshood of the Lombards, sties ag Devote the Charles of the Falshood of the Lombards, sties ag Devote the Charles of the Falshood of the Lombards, sties ag Devote the Charles of the Falshood of the Lombards, sties ag Devote the Charles of the Falshood of the Lombards, sties ag Devote the Charles of the Carolomes. his Broth circles Didier had fo wrought with Caroloman, his Broth cived

7

he found means to hinder him, by raising a dan-

Though the Country of Guienna depended on the wn of France, yet many Rebellions happened by Practice of the Noblemen, who abusing the Bounty the French Kings, that allowed them their antient uleges, were ambitious to be absolute Sovereigns pielves, and to cast off the Dependance upon me; Hunault at this time was the principal Person in Country, whom Geroloman finding to be very defirous teing a Duke, or Prince, refolves to employ him at all his Brother Charles; Hunault not doubting but to de e Credit enough with the People to make himself abguce against the other; Guienna was part of Charle-gue's Territories, against whom Hunault defigns to ke open War; but though the Countenance of Caroan might do much, yet the Wildom and Courage of r's secret Practices, he armed so suddenly, that he ed feveral great Towns, and thereby all that untry adjoining submitted to him. Husault finduntry, called Laup, his faithful and affectionate end, to whom Charles instantly sends to deliver Hunble to refilt, fends him back with all his Family whom Charles graciously grants both Life and Lia ty, and pardons Loup, and all that had obeyed him, weeky ending a dangerous War without Blows.

Garahman finding his Designs against his Brother fuccessful, takes a Voyage to Rome, under shew

deceisful, takes a Voyage to Rome, under shew Devotion, though intending other Matters; his ther Berthe accompanying him, was honourably trived by Didier King of the Lambards, who then the

eges 1 concluded a marriage between her Son Charles on aft Theodora, Daughter to Did er, one of the great Enemies to his Son's good Fortune; yet Charlema e Lon to please his Mother, married this Wife, though Pawl foon after put her away as disagreeable to his I ian, mour and Affairs, and likewife on Sufpicion of ward continency; so that what should be the cause of Lo bred greater Heat between these two Princes. C Chris Char loman having effected nothing at Rome, only discore Son ing his maticious Jealoufy, returns into France, se Aid foon after dies, in the Year of our Lord 770. Cha es of being now alone by his Brother's Decease, qui iuli; takes Possession of his Dominions, and then man the I Hildegard, Daughter of the Duke of Sueve, his and bei Subject, by whom he had three Sons and thand. Daughters. A provide month of the party of the second of the Daughters. another Caroloman's Jealoufy died not with him, for ief A. Wife Birthe, impatient of her Condition, retires eighbored her two Sons to Didier, who contrived with the diversion, to procure from Adrian, then Pope, a Confirme fur ation of her Sons in the Crown of France, which I Pepi Pope absolutely refused; at which Time, Huna tient of forgetful of the Mercy of Charles, comes to Did Superby whom he is received, and made General of chief Army against the Pope, for denying the King arles, Lombardy's Request; who having no other Weap oblige but Excommunication, implores the Aid of Char atrove who first sends Ambassadors to Didier, requiring hes at to restore what he had taken from the Pope, and ied e suffer him to live in Peace; who infisting upon her To ing the Children of Caroloman declared Kings in Children of Child France; his Demands were thought fo unreasona treat that the Treaty is broke off, and Charles instant prepares for War, and in a short Time gives and the Lembards two notable Defeats; and at length fie ges him and all his Forces in Pavia, which was on after furrendered, and Didier falls into his Hands, ho was fent Prisoner to Lyons, and the Kingdom of Pavio, a Council was held at Rome by Popelian, in favour of Charlemagne, and for his Merits ward the Church, the Right to bestow all Benefices Christendom was faid to belong to him.

on e Son of Didier endeavoured to disquiet Italy by bases of Rogand, to whom Charlemagne had given the Diligence of the French Governours; and Rothand. But the End of this War was the Beginning another in Germany, whereof the Saxons were ief Anthors, with the Assistance of some of their divers Times; the Saxons in Germany were at this man fubject to the Crown of France, under Martel infile me subject to the Crown of France, under Martel the Pepin his Son; and the Desire of recovering their una tient Liberty, but especially of retaining their Pa-Did Superstition received from their Ancestors, was of chief occasion of those tedious Troubles; for ing arles, zealous for the Christian Faith, endeavoured eap oblige them to make Profession thereof. Upon the Charles against him, especially when they found him and ied essewhere, and took Strasburg, and several in her Towns then in Possession of the Franch; whereings in Charles calling a Parliament at Worms, levied sons tweet in one Month in the open Field, he reons twice in one Month in the open Field, he regth

or

fie

his Victory with much Modesty and Wisdom, deliging rather to shew his Power than his Justice. To Chief Commander among them was one Wishelm who being by Charles persuaded without any volence to embrace the Christian Religion, by means the greatest Part of the Saxons were brought the Knowledge of the true God, and into Obeden to the French Monarchy.

After this, the Zeal for Religion gave fome Col of Necessity to the heroical Defire of Charlemagni enlarge his Dominions by making War upon the racens or Moory, in Spain, who had then conquered great Part thereof, which they divided into diffi Kingdoms; yet all thefe petty Kings refolved to un against Charles, their common Enemy; and to vent all his Defigne, they caused one of their Kin called Idbunala, to infinuate into his Friending; Charlemagne pushed on both by him and Alphonso named the Chafte) King of Navarry, and well affect thereto himself, he brings his Forces into Spain, takes the Cities of Pampelona and Saragofa, plund ing them, and putting all the Saracens to the Swi Encouraged by this Success, he marches on, rely on his usual Fortune; many small Towns in the W terrified by their Example, yielding upon C polition; and then giving part of his Army to commanded by Milon, his Brother-in-Law, it pened that near Bayonne, Aigoland, a Saraten K took him at fuch Advantage, that he defeated with the Loss of forty thousand Men, Milon him being flain. Algoland elevated with this Victory, Charles being for off, he marches into Gafcoign, befieges Agen, to draw him Home for the Defend his own Country; who doubting of the Fideling the Gascoigns, makes a speedy Return, but so

Manks
make I mak

hat t digola

ended e Tre ith th en to gged andin then d, w ce bis d the Charl. front d thirt and's ad of y: an his Formy, R m with denly untain ring his these forms nbat h

hat the Troops were altogether unferviceable, which digoland being fentible of, fends him a Proposal, That o prevent bloodshed, and the unnecessary Destruction of Mankind, and fince he understood that Charles avould take Peace with them if they would embrace the Chrinight be made only by some few Troops, protesting to yield that Religion which should overcome in the Combat. The Condition was accepted by Charles, and the hristian Troops vanquished the Saracens; Aigoland ereupon declares himself openly a Christian, but innded nothing fels, and takes this Occasion to break e Treaty; he finds Charles at his Table, eating ith the chief of his Followers, (for Kings used not en to ear alone) and fees twelve poor Men in very gged Cloaths near the Nobleman's Table, and deanding who those miserable Creatures were that fed themselves, was told, They were the Messengers of ed, who seplied, Jure your God is very poor himself, ce bis Meffengers are fo very mean and contemptible; d thereupon takes Occasion to retire. ind wo Charlemagne resolving to be revenged for this bold ely front of the Saracens, raifes an Army of a hundred d thirty thousand Men, whereby he defeated Aiand's Forces at Pampelona, and carried away the ead of this prophane King as a Trophy of his Vicy; and afterwards utterly defeated the remainder his Forces. The Saracens again mustering a new my, Rosuland, Nephew to Charles, marches against m with only twenty thousand Men; and being denly set upon in his Passage over the Pyrenean untains, he is over powered with Numbers, and ting himself apart for some Refreshment, he there the sor Thirst, by reason of the long and painful so mbat he had endured; yet not without Revenge,

W

Cd to

th K

gn,

nces,

e Ti

Leo

as ra

len o awn

gaged

ood lo

d acce

oment

appines

wned ans, a rmed i thirt

thout

for he killed Marfeilles, one of their Kings, with own Hand. Charlemagne advertised of this une pected Loss, returns suddenly, and takes Revenge the Saracens, killing a vaft Number of them, a building Tombs for Rowland, and those other va ant Commanders who died in the Bed of Honou lemn and his other urgent Affairs in France requiring auren Presence, he returned thither; thus the War rew Spain ended with little Success, having dillurb eet, h Charles at divers Times for fourteen Years paft.

At his Return from Spain Charlemagne finds 0 row casion to exercise his Valour first in Italy, where sere, I degifa, the Son of Didier, again attempted to set cover himself, but was soon suppressed, with much Loss uke the Lombard Rebels. The like Occasion bred a waptivi in Germany; for King Tafilon, Son-in-law to Did ed his by his Wife's Persuanous, endeavours to shake the all the Yoke, and flies to Arms, engaging the Huns, other Nations, against Charlemagne, who support her A them with fuch happy Success, that Tafilon be d mar vanquished, and found guilty of Treason and Rescises lion, was according to the Salique Law, condem nemies to lose his Estate, whereby the Kingdom of Bava Messio nperor ended, and was incorporated into the Crown France. The Hum (from whom the Hungarians derived) together with the Danes, Westphali rous ? and divers others Nations, who were united in War against Charles, were all brought under his 0 dience, their Countries containing Hungary, We monate chia, Bobemia, Transilvania, Denmark, and Pole thus the French Monarchy grew great by the hi Valour of Charlemagne, France, Italy, Gern Spain, and Hungary, made the Roman Empire is West, and Charles being Master of those goodly nces, was in effect Emperor thereof, and wanted only

e Title, which he obtained by this means.

Leo being then Pope of Rome, a strange Sedition a straifed against him by Sylvester and Campul, see of great Credit in the Court of Rome; who in a lemn Procession seized upon the Pope before St. beet, bruife his Face with their Fifts, and having awn him ignominiously, through the Dirt, they row him into Prison; but he continued not long ere, being freed by a Groom of his Chamber, and for covering St. Peter's Church, he entreats Vingife, for uke of Spoleto, to free him from his milerable Waptivity, who presently marching to Rome, care thall Speed to France to Charles, whom he found a gaged in many Troubles, who yet neglected all the Affairs to affift Leo in this his great Necessity; be d marching to Rome with a potent Army, he speedily de cifies all Disturbances, and punishes the Pope's fleffion of his Sovereignty, declares Charles to be in apperor of the West, which, with the Price of his sood lost in opposing the furious Incursion of bar-ali rous Nations, he had valiantly got Possession of, d accordingly crowns him Emperor, with the full of onfent of the Roman people, who affifted at his woronation, crying with one general Voice, All his runed the great and peaceable Emperor of the Roin rmed in the Year of our Lord 800. Italy having ly rethirty Years past suffered horrible Confusions, via thout Emperor, without Laws, and without Order.

The Seat of the Roman Empire, fince Conftanting the Great, remained at Conflantinople, a City of Thrac convenient for the Guard of the Eastern Province all the West being full of Strangers, who having e pelled the Roman Name and Authority, the Force the Empire remained in the East, where the Sta was in a Strange Confusion by fatal Differences; Co flantine Son to Leo the fourth, was then Empero who (together with the Empire) was governed fro his Infancy by Irene his Mother; at this time the was great Division in the East about Images, whi had already continued eighty Years; the Bishops wou needs bring them into the Christian Church, but we always opposed by Constantine's Predecessors; the Empress having affembled a Council at Nice, was there decreed by her Confent and earnest Defi that Images should be planted in Christian Church for Devotion; Charlemagne did not approve of Decree, but writ or caused to be written, a in Treatife against this Council, to be feen at this D and called, A Treatife of Charlemagne's touching Imag against the Greek Synod

The present Emperor Constantine, retained the reditary hatred of his Father and Grandfat against them; so that being now of Age, and Possession of the Empire. he disannulled all the new Decrees, and caused Images in all Places to beaten down, yet he still shewed Respect to his ther, allowing her great Part of her former Autrity, which occasioned an horrible Tragedy to solk for being enraged both for his crossing her new onion about Images, and for the Loss of part of Power, the resolves to disposses him of the Empirand having corrupted the chief Officers with Son's Money, she seized on him, put out his F

These is a continuous of the c t him

Grie

akes he after at the ommar nagne; nt of the aft and agne, a nued V

borus.

the (

inces diginal owned ermany. Charle oman H uke of t the nce e

ero

hi

thim into Banishment, where he soon after died Grief, and took Possession of the Empire for her-

These unnatural Tragedies were acted in the East, ile Charlemagne, by his great Valour, erected an Sta spire in the West, after Constantine's Death Irene to Charles to excuse herself, disowning the Mur-, and charging it on some who had done it withro the ther Command; and likewife treated with him out marrying her, his Empress being lately dead, on omiting to confent he should be declared Emperor the East, and that she would refign up all her wer to him; but Charlemagne would not accept reof. The Nobility and People after this, had th a public Deteftation of her the Murdress of her in Child, that having suffered her three Years, Niborus, a Nobleman of Greece, affifted by the chief the Court, and with the Confent of the People, skes himself Emperor, and only banishes Irene. e afterwards treats and compounds with Charles, at the Empire of the East continuing under his mmand, that of the West should remain to Charnagne; which being confirmed by the general Afnt of the Greeks, the Empire was divided into the if and West; that of the West began with Charleogne, and remained in his Family while they conned Virtuous, and was afterward removed to the inces of Germany, who acknowledged the German riginal of Charlemagne, he being born at Worms, owned at Spire, and buried at Aix, all Cities of rmany.

Charles lived fifteen Years after he had united the man Empire to the French Monarchy; Grimald, uke of Benevent, after endeavoured to disturb Italy t the Lombards, but was timely prevented; and about the same time the War in Saxony was renews ermany being always prone to Rebellion, and likewife the s Prefe against the Huns, Bohemians, Sclavonians, and San mod . cents as likewife a dangerous War against the as con netians, by whom the Emperor and his French bicrib received a fevere Check, and had Reason to glor cciden that among all the People of Italy Subdued by Ch ing of lemigrae, they remained unvanguished, and were a r tem to appofe themselves against him. At length pport Things being quieted, and Charles finding himse barles old and broken with Cares, and that his three So Arm were wife, valiant, and obedient, he refolved to eant f vide his Empire amongst them; to Pepin, he go orces Italy, to Charles, Germany, and the neighbouri be d Countries; keeping Lewis his eldelt Son at hor er) c to inherit the Kingdom of France; but in a sho e wa Time after, his two Sons Charles and Pepin, the be ny T Supports of the Empire, and the true Inheritors erpriz their Father's Valour, both died, leaving Levels th Brother with large Territories, and main Virtues fucceed in for great an Estate. Gharlemagne seemi pent hereby deprived of his two Arms, his Enemies, Saraceman Spain, and the Sclawonians and Norman the North, role up in Robellion against him; but old and broken as he was, he vanquish'd them i and reduced them again to Obedience. And his A fairs being again fettled, his Mind now worn out w the Tails and Difficulties of his whole Life, require nothing but Reft; and being well instructed in Relig on, and knowing how necessary it was that those w taught others should be well qualified themselves be in Doctine and Manners, he called five Council for referming and governing the Church, and likewife great Countil at Frankfort of the Bishops of Fran we and but was that's presented ; their

Thir but -Dea

xty (

ible,

nir'd

ded

earn

uppli

ilego

Th

only

Exar

with

the treat and Italy, which he himself honoured with San s Presence, where, by general Consent, the sale wood of the Greeks, untruly called, The Seventh, the second as condemned and rejected by all the Bishops, who has condemned and rejected by all the Bishops, who sion bscribed to the Condemnation. After this, a new Che ccident called Charles again to Arms: Alphonse about ing of Navarre (firnamed the Chaste, for his finguity is remperance) fends to him, that now there was me portunity utterly to root the Saracens out of Spain; So barles extremely defirous to finish this Work, raises Army and marches thither; but though Alphonfo ga teant fincerely, the chief of his Court (who feared the orces of Charles no less than the Saracens, doubting on be deprived of their Governments by a new Mathe er) created to many Difficulties and Dangers, that be e was obliged to return into France without acting by Thing confiderable, and so concluded all his En-estroprizes, embracing the Care of Religion as a Sub-est only sit for the Remainder of his Days; he was the actions in Forthe Remainder of his Days; he was any act of the Years old when he left the Wars, and the bent three whole Years in his Closet, reading the lible, and the Books of St. Augustine, whom he admir'd above all the Doctors of the Church; he redded at Paris, to have frequent Conference with the A carned, where he erected a famous University.

upplied with learned Men, enriched with great Pririleges.
Thus Charlemagne spent three Years happily, only in the Care of his Soul, leaving an excellent Example to Princes to moderate their Greatness with Piety, and in the full Enjoyment of temporal Things, not to forget Eternal, nor their Departure out of this Life; then foretelling the Time of his Death, he made his Will, leaving Lewis, his Son,

Junoish Kara

fole Heir of his mighty Dominions, and caufing his wried to be crowned by the general Confent of the Effate fix, in where himself being present, after having made f the long and servent Prayer, prostrate before God, wie a Pa his dear Leavis, he put the Crown upon his Head, and their faid thus to him:

My dear Son, it is this Day that I lie to d Empire of the World, and that Heaven feems make me be born again in your Petion; if yo will reign happily, fear God, who is the Found

tion of Empires, and the fovereign Father of Dominions; keep his Commandments, and cau them to be observed with inviolable Fidelity take the Care and Protection of Religion and God

Church into your Hands ; love your Sisters; re der yourfelf good and officious to your Kindred Honour God's Ministers; cherish tenderly you Subjects as your Children, and, be continually the

Comforter and Protector of the Poor : chastife th

Vicious and recompence Men of Merit; establish

Governours, Judges and Officers, that are capable and without Reproach; and when you have chose them, do not deprive them of their Charges, with out very just Cause. Serve first of all for an Ex ample to all the World, and lead before God and

" Man an irreprovable Life."

After this Action, he survived about a Yea longer, employed in all kind of religious Exercises and then falling fick, continued so only eight Days and died in the Seventy first Year of his Age, and the Forty feventh of his Reign, including the fifteen Years of his Empire, and in the Year of our Lord $14. His corple was exposed in publick, cloather like a King with a Sword, and the Gospel lying by him, which he had fo gloriously defended. He was

burie

admi

any,

sain ;

s Cle

the

nd fing

as uni

ather Chri

the 1

aried with stately Magnissicence, in the Church of six, in a Chappel himself had built. He was one of the greatest Princes of the Age: His Virtue may be a Pattern for Princes, and his Fortune the Subject and their Wishes. The Greatness of his Monarchy admirable, for he quietly enjoyed all France, Gerany, most part of Hungary, all Italy, and part of sain; yet his Virtues were greater than his Empire, is Clemency, Wisdom, Courage, Learning, (even the Holy Scriptures) his Vigilance, Magnanimity, and singular Conduct, deserve immortal Praise. He as universally lamented by all the World, as the their of the Universe, and the singular Ornament Christianity, and truly merited the Name of one the Worthies of the World.

olif

ofer

and

Year

les ayı

and

tee

ON

hed

Was

GODFREN

COOLY STANKA YEAR OF

The for Received of the word that they a long of one form before he to their

In the desire to go or with any age with a prost

To al house of which to be the or

The Ohiland From saidbour to a william.

And the Books, Soils they from a brailing to stood moved the Contact his Course has been treed fole Heir of his mighty Dominions, and caufing he wried to be crowned by the general Confent of the Effat fix, in where himself being present, after having made f the long and servent Prayer, prostrate before God, wie a Pa his dear Leavis, he put the Crown upon his Head, and their faid thus to him:

My dear Son, it is this Day that I lie to the any, it is this Day that I lie to the any, it is this Day that Heaven feems wain;

Empire of the World, and that Heaven feems make me be born again in your Petion; if yo

will reign happily, fear God, who is the Found

tion of Empires, and the fovereign Father of

Dominions; keep his Commandments, and cas them to be observed with inviolable Fidelity

take the Care and Protection of Religion and God

Church into your Hands; love your Sisters; re

der yourfelf good and officious to your Kindred Honour God's Ministers; cheriff tenderly you Subjects as your Children, and, be continually to Comforter and Protector of the Poor; chaftife the

. Vicious and recompence Men of Merit; establish

Governours, Judges and Officers, that are capable

and without Reproach; and when you have chole them, do not deprive them of their Charges, with out very just Cause. Serve first of all for an Ex ample to all the World, and lead before God an

Man an irreprovable Life.'

After this Action, he survived about a Yea longer employed in all kind of religious Exercises and then falling fick, continued so only eight Days and died in the Seventy first Year of his Age, an the Forty feventh of his Reign, including the fifteen Years of his Empire, and in the Year of our Lon 814. His corple was exposed in publick, cloather like a King with a Sword, and the Gospel lying by him, which he had fo gloriously defended. He wa

admi

s Cle

the l d fing as uni

ther Chri the V uried with stately Magnissicence, in the Church of six, in a Chappel himself had built. He was one of the greatest Princes of the Age: His Virtue may be a Pattern for Princes, and his Fortune the Subject of their Wishes. The Greatness of his Monarchy admirable, for he quietly enjoyed all France, Gerany, most part of Hungary, all Italy, and part of sain; yet his Virtues were greater than his Empire, so Clemency, Wisdom, Courage, Learning, (even the Holy Scriptures) his Vigilance, Magnanimity, and singular Conduct, deserve immortal Praise. He as universally lamented by all the World, as the other of the Universe, and the singular Ornament Christianity, and truly merited the Name of one the Worthies of the World.

ofe

ifes ayı

an

the

b

wa

GODFREN

TOTAL Water of the Course of t that he is the state and the second of the second

In within to go was be anger and a first

And the Michael States they freely opinion living?

Philips Brown HI Don't function to guilty give:

and moved by Court his Prince and con long.

The bearing of the work of the second of the

GODFREY of BOLDIGNE

ODFREY a Worthy's Name doth well deserve, I Whom for his Valour, All might with to ferve He, for Recovery of the Holy-land, The Turks and Infidels did oft withfland; Whereby at length be won Jerusalem, That had a long Time been enflave'd by them, In which be fo much Courage made appear, The Christian Princes with one Voice declare, That be alone shall be Jerusalem's King, And the Richest Spoils they freely to him bring : Which Honour, all Men fince, him justly give : And mong the Great bis Fame fall ever live.

b s of or, al and :

eir Re nally hich I is, th liking arch f ellwa lucing her la e Cit rvitud Zea d De ed the French

Pilgri Wof Yea s inte able folved en Pri reived m De firff rt of urt of a, and triarch his

BOUT the Year of our Lord 647, the Arabian Saracens, under their Caliphe, the Success s of Mahomet, conqueted all Upper Afia and Eor, and did likewife possess Palestine, or the Holyand after which, the Turks feizing on it, did by eir Revolt, bftablish a new Empire in Afia, being orinally descended from that Part of Sarmatia in Afia, high lies between Mount Caucasus, the River Tais, the Lake of Meetis, and the Cafpian Sea; who fiking their old Habitations, divided themselves to arch for new Countries, and advanced by Degrees estward, to the very Banks of the River Danubin; lucing likewise the Empire of Persia, and many her large Kingdoms and Provinces. Pulefine and city of Jerusalem groaning under the Turtist rvitude, feveral Christian Princes were enflamed by Zeal of those Times to undertake the Conquest d Deliverance of the Holy-Land, being much ined thereto by the warm Sollicitations of one Peter, fromb Hermit, who going among a great Number Pilgrims, which continually toforted thither from all Woftern part of the World, arrived there about Year rods, and being of a Brisk Temper, be s informed by the Patriarch Simeon of the miable flavery of those Countries, who thereopen lolved to make it his Bufiness to engage the Christ an Princes to unite for their Deliverance, having eived Letters from the Patriarch according to his m Defire to that Purpose, and then embarking in first Ship, in a few Days he sately arrived at the nt of Bari, from whence he proceeds to the purt of the then Pope Urban the fecond, a Frencha, and having delivered him the Letters from the triarch of Jerusalem, he gave him a full Account his Commission; the Pope allowed him a favourable vourable Reception, and being before well affected the Business, he told Peter, that he would employ all the Power he had in Heaven and Earth, his Forces, his Revenue, his Reputation, and all his pontifical Authority, to form a Holy-League of a the Western Princes for opposing the Insidels, who is cruelly tyrannized over the Christians of the East advising Peter in the mean time to endeavour to dispose the Minds of the People in all the Countries of Europe, by publishing to them what he had with much Zeal, and Passion related to him.

U

Peter, by the Pope's Command, applied himle to this Affair in all Places; and in less than on Year, by Treating and Preaching with most of the Princes and People of Christendom, he engaged the with vehement Impatience to defire the confumma ing of this League, and to have a Share in t Glory of redeeming the Holy-Land. Urban having Information of the success of this wondrous Ma and being at the same Time sollicited thereto Alexis Comenius the Greek Emperor, he thereup fummons a Council at Placentia, where this Propo met with fuch general Approbation, that the Po overjoyed thereat, cried out, It is the Will of Go which Word, being fpoken by him with great A dency of Spirit, they were after ordered to be t Motto which should be wrought in the Colours at Standards of the Army, and which the Captai and Soldiers; should make use of in their Comba against their Enemies, and that they should all like wife wear a red Cross upon their Right Shoulde to declare that they had the Honour to serve und him who had overcome all the Enemies of Cross.

lobers be C arl o luke * stace arl o ords a inces antino as the a the oloigne d Bre e deri orrain, m hs

In

aual

here

nd E

was of the conding of gne, w

what Childs three

In the Year 1096, several christian Princes had dually engaged themselves in this War, the chief hereof were, Hugh the Great Earl of Vermandois, nd Brother to Philip the first King of France; lobers Duke of Normandy, Son to King William ne Conqueror, Robert Earl of Flanders, Raymond arl of Thoulouse, and St. Giles Godfrey of Boloigne luke of Lorrain, with his Brother Baldwin and ufface, Stephen Earl of Chartres, and Blois, Hugh arl of St. Paul, with a very great Number of other ords and Persons of Quality. The first of these inces who advanced with his Troops toward Conantinople, was the famous Godfrey of Boloigne, he as the Son of Euflace second Earl of Boloigne, and a the sister of Godfrey of Bossu, Earl of Ardenna, oloigne and Verdun, and Duke of the lower Lorrain de Brahant; and from him in a Lineal Descent the derived all the Princes of that fair Dutchy of m h s Heir, and gave him the Earldom of Bogne, which occasioned him to have that Sirname, no by his heroick Actions hath rendered himself to of the Worthies of the World; he was natuly inclined to all forts of Virtues, much wherewas owing to his happy Education and was owing to his happy Education under the act Care of a wife Fatner, and a Mother of exordinary Merit, who with diligence unusual to Sex, herfelf studied, and therefore infused into tail n all Sorts of curious Learning; and is faid to ba re predicted the future Greatnels of her three Sons; one Day as the Earl her Husband demanded of de what she had in her Lap; being playing with and Children, the very feriously answered, that the three great Princes, one Duke, one King, and one Barl, which was afterwards verified in the mirable Fortunes of thefe three Princes, for G frey was Duke of Lorrain, and King of Jerulale Baldwin was King of the same Realm after G frey, and Prince of Bdeffa; and Euflace, whom for fay was the elder Brother, was Earl of Boloigne ter the Death of his Father. It is likewise relate that the had a strunge Dream before the Birth Prince Godfrey, for the Sun feemed to descend for the Sky and fail into her Lap, and fhe faw her lin Son fitting on a Throne in the midft thereof; this is certain that the used to relate with m Pleasure, after the glorious Success her Sons had the boly War, that long before there was any I course thereof, Prince Godfrey used to say, That would one Day take a Poyage to Jerusalem, not Devotion only as a Pilgrim, but as a Captain and queror at the Head of an Army, to chafe the will Infidels from that baly Place.

After his Uncle's Death, the Emperor Henry fourth pretending that the Dutchy of the lo Lorrain, for want of Heirs Male, devolved to conferred it on his Son Comude, leaving Godfrey thing there but the Marquilate of Antwerp; and the other fide, Albert Earl of Namur, his Kinfa and the Bishop of Verdin, endeavoured to deprive of Boloigne and Verdun, fo that before he was venteen Years of Age he was compelled to an Valour for recovering his Right; which he did vanquilling their joint Forces, and conquering Albert in a fingle Combat; and then affifted Emperor Henry in his Wars in Italy and Gen though he had injuriously dealt with him, who at lepgth so much overcome by his extraord Merit, and the confiderable Services he had

ton

med

in, h

ned

ve h

Godf

yage

eml

at he

Liege

d A

ferve

ves 1

using

e the

pedit

y far

Lov

raife

hed h inces

him

In A ge, G

d fev

ndcd .

uality,

vaft

Philip

exis t

gth c on afte pital (

acing l

Chi

med, that he again put him into possession of Lorin, his Mother's Inheritance, which he had dened from him for thirteen Years; and likewise we him his Adeligda in Marriage.

Godfrey's Affairs being in fo good a Posture, the yage for the Holy-Land was proclaimed; which embraced with fuch Earne hels and Generofity. at he fold almost all his Estate to the Bishops Liege and Verdun to raise Forces, so that by an d Adventure the Princes impoverished themselves Serve Jesus Christ, and the Priests enriched themves with the Spoils of these temporal Princes, using rather to make use of that Money (which e them they should have employed in this holy spedition) to advance their present Fortunes, which y faw these Princes so generously part with for Love of God. Godfrey being hereby provided raise Soldiers, his Fame and Reputation soon furhed him with military Men from all parts, many nces and Gentlemen, also his Friends ferving unr him as Volunteers.

nu

d D at

t]

vid

nd

nía

ve

725 did

ed era

ho

ad for In Aways 1006, and in the 36th Year of his ge, Godfrey with an Army of ten thousand Horse, d seventy thousand Foot, well appointed, and ataded with many Princes and Nobles of the first tality, marched into Germany, and passing over evast Countries of Bulgaria, he at length arrived Philipolis in Thracia, where some Differences with exis the Greek Emperor being composed, he at agth came to Constantinople, whither the rest of Christian Princes and their Forces following on after, it was resolved first to besiege Nice, the pital City of Bynthynia; and Duke Godfrey adacing before as far as Nicomedia, and having levelled the Ways over the Mountains from that Town Nice, they invested that Place. Mar. 16, Godfe with his Brother Baldwin took the Right Ha over against the principal Gate of the City, who it was most strongly fortified; Mar. 24, a gener Affault was given upon several Quarters at once, a the Combat continued all Day till Night part them, and the next Morning again renewed wi extraordinary Fury, though without Effect, the B fieged being not only gallant Men, but in hour expectation of Relief from Solyman the Turkish Es peror, to whom they had dispatch'd an Express inform him of their Condition, and the Sulta Letters in answer to them, whereby he affor them of certain Relief the next Morning, being tercepted by the Christians, they accordingly ma Provision to receive him; the Turks early in Morning descended from the Mountains, and viding into two great Bodies, one of them affault Godfrey's Quarter which lay next to that of Re mond Earl of Flanders, but were received by be these Princes with so much Vigour, that they we presently put into Disorder, and forced to a ha Flight; yet the Befieged continued to make and ftinate Defence, among whom there was one valid Turk, who for his great Bulk and extraordin Strength seemed a Giant, that defended one of Towers which were affaulted by Count Raymo he had been often repulfed, but flill renewed Attack, making terrible Havock among the Christia and intolerably infulting over those who fell un his Aims, and exposing himfelf naked to a Number of Arrows that were thot at him, he with b his Hands fell throwing down Stones of a prodig Bign igneficking riftled uarte arbari ceive allante g ma e Bei

e ver

hrittia
The
arche r Cor
odies;
uke o
tht H

d not nan w d Penj rabian wistian ove t vertise ain joi ldiers, es they fighti the Wipeated

y died.

cks, a

and

igness, upon those who attempted to undermine we Wall, though he had above twenty Arrows icking in his Breast, and looked as if he were issued with them; Godfrey coming from his own warter, and unable to endure this Insolence of a arbarian, with a well placed Arrow shot him throe every Heart, and tumbled him dead into the Ditch; us the bravest Man of the Turks seemed to stay to ceive an honourable Death from the Hand of the allantest of the Christians; soon after Solyman have made another fruitless Attempt to relieve them, e Besieged delivered up the City by Treaty to the hristians.

The Princes not to lose the Season of the Year, arched immediately from thence toward Syria, and r Conveniency of Forage they separated into two odies; that part under the Earl of Flunders and the ike of Normandy taking the Left, and Godfrey the ht Hand, but yet without distancing the Armies ove two Miles afunder; the Duke of Normandy d not marched far when they had notice that Sonan with three hundred and fixty thouland Turks d Persians, all Horse, with an infinite Number of abians, intended to furprize and furround the triftians the next Morning, who instantly fent to vertise Duke Godfrey of their Danger, who ain joining the Army, the Princes encouraged their ldiers, telling them, That they were the fame Enees they had oft before vanquished ar Nice, and that fighting valiantly against these wicked Infidels, if y died, they might be certain of eternal Happiness; then drawing their Swords they cried out, It the Will of God; which Words the whole Army eated with such a terrible Harmony, the Valleys, cks, and Mountains shook with the dreadful Eccho;

R

bo

we had

9 12

tan

100

b

and thereupon presently engaging, by the Cond of Godfrey and Raymond, who ran full Speed un the Turks with the European Lances, which they neither Shields nor Breaft-plates to oppose, the were overthrown Horse and Man, and the An not enduring a Charge Hand to Hand; fearing be furrounded, began to betake themselves to Fig which caused such Fear and Disorder in the wh Army, that it put them in a Moment to a gene Rout, and the Christians obtained a complete Vi tory, with a prodigious quantity of Booty and Pla der, which they found in the Turkish Camp, and the marching forward toward Syria, they arrived abo Antioch and Pifidia, which fu rendered to them wi out Resistance, as did most of the other Cities their Paffage, fangt vont overed to

Whilft the Army refresh'd themselves in Pill after such Toils and Hardships, Prince Gedfreit like to have been loft by a ffrange Accident, while however redounded in conclusion much to the H nour of this Prince, advancing his Reputation, Co rage and Nobleness, which appeared even to Adm ration upon this dangerous Occasion; for one D entering alone on Horseback into a Wood, he he the Voice of a Man who cryed out for Help w all his Power, and advancing to the Place for whence the Noise came, he perceived it was a po Soldier who coming to cut Wood was almost quite of Breath running round a great Tree to fave hi telf from the merciles Jaws of a monstrous Be which was just ready to seize upon him; Godfrey to sported with Courage and Charity, spurred on Horse with his Sword in his Hand toward the co Beaft, who forfaking the Soldier, with inflam ad along the more problem in forfe, roid of Me Duey ni ft Pa in his conftr g in werth at Go es,

o for

f up

lood, own ot mo whole dence udgm e gaine H

Voun

omb

The art of inch, rom of ort of vere uin th

he Nout the

ndi

up y b

ng

ligh

who

ener

abo

Co

D

hea Wi

fro po

teo

his

tra

am

es, gaping Jaws, and the terrible Claws of her o fore-paws, advanced toward him, and raising her. f upon her hinder feet to throw herfelf upon the orfe, the was affrighted with the Sword, and to oid the Blow fell fideling, but so that the Horse d Man fell over her, and she catched hold of e Duke's Coat to draw him toward her; but God. ey nimbly recovering his Fall, and feizing on her ft Paw, which she thrust out to lay hold of him, he V in his Sword up to the Hilt in the Belly of this Ph confrous Enemy, when one of his Gentlemen comverthrown with the terrible Blow she had received. without Godfrey, in drawing his Sword from between his vound in his Thigh, which during the Heat of the ombat he did not perceive, he had loft fo much while lood, that after he began to cool, he suddenly sunk own into a Swoon; this Accident, though it proved to mortal, spread a mighty Consternation through the hole Army, as if all had been loft; fo much Condence and Authority they placed in his Valour and udgment, especially fince the last Battle where e gained the Christians a glorious Victory out of the Hands of the Infidels, who were just ready to oin them:

The Christians having conquered Cilicia, and great art of Armenia, they next belieged the City of Aninch, and having laid some time before it, two Fleets Be from Genoa and Pifa, arrived very fortunately at the Port of St. Simeon with all forts of Provisions, which on he News thereof no fooner arrived at the Camp, out the Soldiers ran thither in Shoals to furnish them-En elves with what they wanted, The Turks, who continually watched for all Advantages, laid an Am heir rebuscade of sour Thousand Men that secretly sallie mong out of the Town, who meeting with the Soldiers is ble Switheir Return without Order or Arms, but only the swords, and loaden with Provisions, they fell upon or, with them, and obliged them to fly to the Mountains ther P leaving all their Provisions, and a Thousand of the quadrates are deed upon the Place.

Companions dead upon the Place.

Companions dead upon the Place.

Godfrey soon advertised of this Disaster, took the Godfrey from Party, resolving immediately to charge the nall Resolver, whom he doubted not to find in sufficient distriction order upon Joy of their Victory; the Governour of the Castle odfrey observed this Motion of the Towers of the Castle odfrey observed this Motion of the Christians, was in much rible Pain for the safe return of his Men, and therefore age, a commanded the greatest part of his Army to sall ble a out of the City for their Relief; Godfrey marches two on slowly, having notice that the Conquerous lead; having joined the Troops of the Town, drew no we his loaded with the Booty; then drawing his Sword as we on loaded with the Booty; then drawing his Sword as we on loaded with the Booty; then drawing his Sword as we on loaded with the Booty; then drawing his Sword as we on loaded with the Booty; then drawing his Sword as we on loaded with the Booty; then drawing his Sword as we on loaded with the Booty; then drawing his Sword as we on loaded with the Booty; then drawing his Sword as we on loaded with the Booty; then drawing his Sword as we on loaded with the Booty; then drawing his Sword as we on loaded with the Booty; then drawing his Sword as we have the loaded with the Booty; then drawing his Sword as we have the loaded with the Booty; then drawing his Sword as we have the loaded with the Booty; then drawing his Sword as we have the loaded with the Booty; then drawing his Sword as we have the loaded with the Booty is the loaded w loaded with the Booty; then drawing his Sword an g on turning to his Men, after he had look'd fiercely to east to ward the Enemy, he cried, Follow me, it is the Will turn of God; ordering them only to use their Sword per re without either Lances or Arrows, fo that with the rough Swords drawn and their Bucklers, they made a kin flrue of a Pent-house against the Arrows of the Turb Iders who being thereby put out of their usual way of who fighting, the Service of their Bows being taken from ted the them, they presently recoiled upon their Assistant in lo and being encumbered with Spoils, the Christians is possible into the midst of them, and on all hands made great most horrible Slaughter of these miserable Wretche ad Bo so that they were totally Routed, some slying to the Mountains, others toward the City, not dreaming the sely the Gate was shut against them; Gedfrey to prevent sofur the

em ;

heir return into the Town, flew like Lightning mong his Enemies; there was no Blow of his terble Sword which drew not a dreadful Death with , fo that he filled all with Horror, Blood, and Teror, which way foever he turned himself; and the ther Princes finding the Enemies stopt by Godfrey's quadron, made a most woeful Destruction among tem; and their lamentable Cries at length obliged the Governour to open the Gates, and receive the hall Remainder into Antioch.

One of the principal Turks, of a Stature much exall offrey killed all who came within the reach of his adminded with his broad Sword discharged so terall ble a Bow on the Duke, that he split his Shield two Pieces, which he had opposed to secure his on ead; when Godfrey raising himself in his Stirrups, no we him such a furious Stroke, that his Sword fall-an g on his right Shoulder, passed quite through his who east to his left Side, and made that half of his Bo-Will tumble to the Ground, while, by the Horse, the order remaining on the Saddle, was carried quite ordener remaining on the Saddle, was carried quite the rough the Town, making fuch a fearful Spectacle kin fruck Conflernation and Horror in all the Believe lders; Night coming on, the Defendants throwly of whole Showers of Arrows from the Walls, hinfron ted the further Pursuit of the Victory; the Christant ins lost above a Thousand Men; but, it is almost a few great that they partly stopped the River with their technology of the Bodies.

The After this great Victory, the besieged were more again selected by Stratagem by the Christian Princes; which

the

which

which was followed by another great Victory Th. wherein the Enemy lost an hundred thousand Horse and an incredible Number of Foot. Had then the arch Princes assembled to consult concerning the Prince om Spal Enterprize, which was that of Jerusalem; do the ring which Godfrey or Geoffry de la Tour, going of e Houpon a Party as he frequently did, he heard thole upon a Party as he frequently did, he head the terrible roaring of a Lyon, who feemed rather paining cry out for some dreadful Mishap befallen him, the lege, in following the Prey to devour it, and without to Pla moment's Deliberation, he broke away from the ore that would have held him, toward the next Woo of about and ran directly to the Noise, where he saw a ho lorse, rible Serpent of prodigious Magnitude, who have outar wound himself about the Legs of a Lyon, had pread we vented him from defending himself, and darted magnitude. Blows at him with his Tongue to kill him with Poyson; who thereupon struck the Serpent such the Blow with his Sword, that he killed him with rew t hurting the Lyon, and after that cut the Wreaths the Serpent wherewith he was entangled; when poor Lyon faw himself at Liberty, he came in poor Lyon saw himself at Liberty, he cane in second most expressive manner, and with the greatest second mission, to render Thanks to his Deliverer, Couch a county of the Reafon. him, alls, rately o we ís : a ch adm

orle th

de

ert

ut

ho

vi

ich tho his

n

n t ich

WO

The Christians now marching with all Speed toard Terufalem, took Rama in their way, and then arching to Emaus, about two Leagues and an half om Jerusalem, they from thence had a fair Prospect the lofty Towers of the Holy City, which filled e Hearts of the Princes, Officers, Soldiers, and the hole Troop of Pilgrims with great Joy; and then ming up to it, that they might avoid a tedious the ege, like that of Antioch, it was refolved to attack e Place by main Force, though those within were ore numerous than the Christian Army, who were of pt above twenty thousand Foot, and fifteen Hundred orfe, the rest of that vast Number of three hundred oufand Men who came into Afia, being either ad with Difeases, or flain in the several Encounma rs; the Christians therefore coming up close to the halfs, raised up their Scaling-Ladders and mounted the Top, from whence with mad Courage they rew themselves into the Town, where they desrately fought Hand to Hand with the Saracens, o were amazed at this more than heroick Boldis; and no doubt if they had more Ladders, Je-falem had been that Day taken; but fince one Ladr could only Mount a few Men, a Retreat was unded, after having lost a great many brave Solaith ers in that rash Attempt, who yet sold their Lives dear, that twice as many of the Saracens fell with l, tem.

e, Duke Godfrey concerned at this Miscarriage, rea Engines of War, which he managed with fuch traordinary Success, that making a great Breach in once Walls, he threw himself into the Town with th admirable Courage that the other Princes followhim, they in a short time all entered, and took the full Possession, putting all the Inhabitants to the Sword, and killing the very Children in the Am of their Mothers, thereby if it were possible to a tinguish the whole Race of Turks. In short a motherible Vengeance was taken upon them, the Househing plundered, the whole Army sound themselven enriched beyond Imagination; the richest Booty we found in the Temple of Solemon, from whence we taken an inestimable Treasure of Gold, Silver, as Jewels, which the Princes generously presented to Duke Godfrey, as the Person to whose only Co taken an inestimable Treasure of Gold, Silver, Jewels, which the Princes generously presented rage and Conduct it was due. Eight Days after this happy Conquest, the Print and Lords affembled to re-establish the ancient G vernment of Jerusalem by giving it a King; vers were proposed, and it was offered to Robe Duke of Normandy, Son to William the Conqueror but he defigned to return home as foon as possible declining it, telling the Affembly, 'That it was me evident they ought to chose that Person whose I ety, Modesty, Prudence Justice, Valour, and Su cels, had appeared in many Occasions; that Pe fon whole Strength of Age, Body, Nobility, Gre nels and Majesty, worthy of an Empire, conspin to rank him among the greatest Princes that er were; and My Lords (faid be) all these ext ordinary Qualities render themtelves fo conspic ous in the Berson who possesses them, that it is feem unnecessary to name him, and God him . feems to have nominated him in giving him the furpassing Advantages above the rest of Mankin whom he had choien like a fecond David to King of Jerufalem; it is the Huftrious Godfrey Boloigne, - Duke of Lorrain; the Prince had fooner named, but the whole Asiembly interrup him, CI Godfre Mant 6 tanding was obl onfrm ery far he Hol he Acc Christia nhabit ented earls : ufed w bear t Savio Should he hat I fuffe he ha should a Van is Go it is h Succes than t of Ch imfelf iven hi ty have ever a ious Ti ctions.

erusale

him, crying out with the fame Mind and Voice! Godfrey, Godfrey, long live Godfrey, the most pufant and pious King of Jerusalem; and notwith-tanding all the Resistance of that modest Prince, he was obliged to confent to the Election which feemed onfirmed to him by Divine Approbation; and the very fame Day he was conducted to the Church of he Holy Sepulchre, and there proclaimed King amidst he Acclamations of the whole Army, and all the Christians of the Country, who came flocking in, to nhabit the City of Jerusalem; he was there pre-ented with a Royal Crown, richly adorned with Pearls and precious Stones which he absolutely reused with this zealous Answer. Why should I bear the Name of a King in the Place where my Saviour hath been Crowned with Reproaches? Should I take the Sceptre in my Hand, where he hath taken the Crofs upon his Shoulder? Should I fuffer a Crown of Gold upon my Head, where he hath received a Crown of Thorns? Sure I should then hold my felf for vanquished, if fuch a Vanity should be Victorious over my Heart. It is God that hath inspired us with these Designs; it is he that bath conducted and crowned us with Success; I pretend therefore to to other Honours. than to lay all Honours at the Peet of the Crofs of Christ But though he would not take upon imself the Name of King, yet it was constantly iven him, as all Historians of that time, and Postety have ever fince done to this Day; and certainly ever any King better deserved to wear that gloious Title, which he adorned, with fo many Royal ctions.

The Sultan of Egitt coming too late to relieve erusalem, advanced now with a formidable Army to beliege it, against whom Godfrey and his Soldiers marched with much Courage and Refolution, over whom they obtained an entire Victory, with richer Pillage than any time before in the whole War, the Enemy losing thirty thousand upon the Place, and as many more in the Pursuit. After this Battle the Princes and great Lords who followed them, be lieving they had fully accomplished their Vows of recovering the Holy-Land, took their Leave of Kind Godfrey to return to their respective countries, leave ing him only three hundred Horse, and about two thousand Foot, with which few Troops the King to enlarge the Frontiers of his new Kingdom, conquere the Places which were yet untaken round about 76 rusalem; and now after so many Toils, being falle fick he caused himself to be removed to the City where July 8. 1100, in the Fortieth Year of h Age, and the first of his Reign, he rendered hi plorious Soul into the Hands of his Almighty Re deemer, by a most religious Death, this Brothe Baldswin succeeding King of Jerujalem in his stead He was a Prince in whom all Virtues, Christia Civil, and Military, met in the highest Point of he man Perfection, without Mixture of any Default fo that it will remain difficult to find another, li him, to whom without Flattery the same Praise may be given, and which induced future Ages, bestow on him the Honourable Title of one of Worthies of the World.

20 JY 64

layed whem at F' I be No I S.

advinced how with a formidable street

